Senate Unit Agreed Upon To Dig Deep Into Rackets

Kefauver Expected To Be Chairman; Ferguson, Donnell Apparently Dropped

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senate Democratic leaders agreed unanimously yesterday to set up a special five-man committee to conduct a "full, extensive and fair investigation of crime syndicates operating in interstate commerce."

That description of the committee's agreed-upon job came from Majority Leader Lucas (Ill.), who made the announcement after a lengthy Democratic Policy Committee meeting.

Senator Kefauver, the Tennessee Democrat who first proposed a Senate investigation of the "tygoons," the big time racketeers, will "in all probability" be the chairman, Lucas said.

Plans Investigation

Kefauver later told reporters he planned a "no stones unturned, no holds barred, right down the middle of the road, let the chips fall where they may" investigation. In reply to a question, he said the committee undoubtedly would have to go to various cities around the country and in reply to another query he added:

"As far as I'm concerned, there will be no shying away from Kansas City or anywhere else."

Kansas City was the scene last week of the murder of Charles Binaggio, Democratic political leader, which has been blamed on big-time interstate racketeers.

Kefauver said it would take no more than two or three weeks to begin public hearings once the Senate approves the committee plan. But he said he doubted there would be any "immediate sensational developments."

Senator Is Jubilant

In a jubilant mood, the Senator added that he expects the scope of the special crime committee to be "exactly" the same as the probe already approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee of which he is a member. That resolution has been stalled, however, because of a jurisdictional row with the Interstate Commerce Committee and the apparent desire of Administration leaders in the Senate to avoid having Republican Senators Donnell (Mo.) and Ferguson (Mich.) serve on the proposed committee.

In reply to a question, Kefauver said the approval of the special committee did not involve any effort to "sidetrack" the two Republicans. But Ferguson said he had been "euchred" out of a place on the probe unit. He and Minority Leader Wherry indicated the Republicans might make a fight over the new committee when the resolution to set it up comes to the

Gunfire Punctuates Chase

Loot Found, Suspect Seized Minutes After $2000 Holdup

A daring $2000 daylight robbery of a life insurance company was foiled yesterday when police cornered one of the suspects in an empty house after a 10-minute chase, punctuated with gun-fire.

Soon after, they recovered all but $25 of the $2393.23 loot in an alley through which the suspect had fled.

The bandit suspect, Andrew Carlos Ware, 28, of 1333 10th st. nw., was identified by several persons at a lineup last night at police headquarters, police said.

Ware was charged with robbery by force and violence and assault with intent to kill. He will appear before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence at 9:30 a. m. today.

Two police officers found Ware huddled under a bed on the third floor of a house at 1935 13th st. nw. He told them "some man was trying to get me."

Earlier, a man identified as Ware had exchanged shots with Pvt. Thomas F. Walker, Thirteenth Precinct, when Walker, who had joined a chase started immediately after the holdup, followed him into an alley near the 13th st. house. Walker said he shot twice after Ware fired at him with a .32-caliber pistol. Walker said he saw Ware jump a fence and throw himself through a closed window in the vacant house in which he was found.

The robbery occurred shortly before 1 p. m. when two men, both armed and wearing handkerchief masks, entered the second

Board Asks Fund to Run Golf Courses

The District Recreation Board yesterday asked for a $275,000 loan with which to buy out the concessionnaire operating the city's five public golf courses and to run them in 1951.

At the same time, the board rejected an Interior Department offer to turn over the six public swimming pools here if the board conducts them on a non-segregated basis.

The same motion severed the board's final connection with the pools, in directing that morning swimming classes be discontinued this summer.

It also turned down a recommendation by the Joint Social Order Committee of the Friends Meetings of Washington that on the basis of interracial use of two playgrounds last summer, segregation be eliminated at all others.

The $275,000 loan is expected to provide the funds necessary to repay the Loeffler Co., golf course operators since 1921, for construction advances, purchase of equipment, and stock inventory, and furnish a revolving fund for operation of the courses by the board.

The request for funds marks culmination of a year's investigation by a congressional committee and the Recreation Board of the present concession arrangement between Severine G. Loeffler, sr., head of the Loeffler Co., and the Interior Department.

The board voted unanimously to ask the District Commissioners for a supplemental appropriation to the 1951 budget, with the proviso that the $275,000 will be repaid without interest over 20 years.

If Congress grants the money, the board asked authority to

Many Needy Facing Crisis As Relief Funds Are Slashed

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Harris family has to figure out how to feed and clothe itself on $13.33 apiece next month.

This is because the Harris family is on District relief, and all relief grants have been cut back 8 percent by the Public Welfare Department starting May 1.

It will be the second time this year the Harris family has had to pull in its belts. They started out with $87 per month, then were cut back to $76 when a 12 percent cut was made. The latest relief cut leaves them $70.

Of this amount, $30 is a flat allowance, of which $25 goes for rent, $3 for utilities, $2 for refrigeration. The cut which reduces the family's allowance to $40 per month comes in the "basic personal needs" items.

And Mrs. Harris, 35, who can't go out and get a job because she has arrested tuberculosis, will have to absorb the cut for herself, her 12-year-old son and a 6-year-old daughter, both in school.

Her husband, 37, can't help either. He could have four years ago, before he also contracted tuberculosis, had to give up his Government job and enter a sanitorium.

Mrs. Harris will have the diet problems, the deciding as to "basic personal needs" like food, clothing, household necessities, insurance, medicine, school books, carfare and

Probe to Hear Budenz Talk On Lattimore

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Louis F. Budenz, former Communist editor of the Daily Worker, was disclosed yesterday to be the "mystery witness" who will testify against Far East expert Owen Lattimore.

He was subpenaed by the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating the charges of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.). He will testify before the subcommittee in public hearings on April 20.

Budenz, in Midland, Mich., yesterday on a speaking engagement, said he had never seen McCarthy, never talked to him and did not know him. According to the United Press, the subpena action was a "surprise" to him. According to the Associated Press, he had been expecting it.

He refused to comment on the Lattimore case and declined to say whether he knew him.

No Information on Budenz

Lattimore, through his lawyers, issued a statement yesterday declaring that he did not know Budenz, "and to the best of my recollection have never met him, and have never been associated directly or indirectly with him."

He said he had no information as to what statements Budenz might give the subcommittee. Then he repeated the denial of all and any Communist connections which he had sworn to before the subcommittee last week. He said he was well aware that he was liable to prosecution for perjury if that statement was proven false by Budenz or anyone else.

In Washington, McCarthy confirmed Budenz' statement that he and Budenz had not met. McCarthy said he learned of Budenz' views through a third party, and thereupon avoided talking to him when he was told that Budenz would testify if he were subpenaed.

Favors Bipartisan Opposition

At a press conference in Midland, Budenz handed reporters a statement in which he said:

"My position on testifying remains the same as that of the past five years. That is, I will testify upon subpena if any Government agency makes the request on a non-partisan basis.

"I am not interested in the discussion of how communism affects partisan politics. To the contrary, I hope to see a strong bipartisan policy of opposition to communism.

"My hopes have been not to testify in any further cases. Last Christmas I made a pledge to refrain from such testimony and the Department of Justice generously did not call me in the (Harry) Bridges case."

Budenz was president and managing editor of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, from 1940 to 1945 when he renounced communism and joined the Catholic Church.

Washington Hails Chile's Chief Today

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

With bands, color guards, singers, posters and bedecked fire towers, Washington will extend a welcome this afternoon to President Gabriel Gonzalez-Videla of Chile.

The expected rousing welcome will supplement the protocol of the official state visit by the 50-year-old executive of the South American republic.

President Gonzalez, accompanied by his wife and daughter and Chilean officials, is due to arrive from Florida at 3 p. m. at the Military Air Transport terminal in the Presidential plane, Independence.

Presidential Greeting

President Truman and Government dignitaries will greet the party and join it in a motorcade. The route will be via Memorial Bridge, around Lincoln Memorial to 23d st., right on Constitution ave. to 12th st., then left to Pennsylvania ave. and thence to the District Building.

En route, the cars will pass light poles decorated with flags of both nations, and messages of welcome. Twelve bands will be posted along the route, and more than 60 color guards drawn from high school cadet and veterans' organizations and the District National Guard will stand at attention.

The vehicles will drive under two sets of fire towers trimmed in the colors of Chile and the United States and bearing huge portraits of the visiting dignitary.

The motorcade will halt in front the District Building between 3:30 and 3:40 p. m. for a 90-minute ceremony arranged by a citizens' committee headed by Edgar Morris.

Party's Itinerary

Commissioner John Russell Young will present the traditional key to the city to President Gonzalez and Morris will present flowers to his wife. Several talks on Chile and its President, plus songs and numbers by the United States Marine Band and the Metropolitan Police Band are programmed.

Afterward the motorcade will proceed to Blair Lee House, where the visitors will pass the night. Later they will move to the Chilean Embassy.

Their itinerary includes visits to Philadelphia, New York, New Orleans, Houston and the Tennessee Valley Authority project.

Government workers will be dismissed early to permit them to join in the welcome.

Several downtown streetcar and bus lines will be rerouted between 3 and 4:30 p. m., the Capital Transit Co. announced. No streetcars will operate on Pennsylvania ave. between 9th and 17th sts. nw. in that period.

Claude G. Bowers, Ambassador to Chile, briefed the press on Chile and its President yesterday. These were some of the high points:

His Ancestor Set Fire to It

North Ireland Prime Minister Says White House Is 'Familiar'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Sir Basil Brooke, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, thought that the White House looked familiar yesterday, despite its scaffolding and the building materials piled up on the lawn.

In a good-humored speech at the National Press Club, he told why.

"I am a direct descendant of the man who burned the White House in 1812," Sir Basil said, amidst laughter. "When I passed the White House today and saw the scaffolding, I thought to myself that he did a pretty good job. Now, gentlemen, don't hold it against me . . ."

Sir Basil disclosed afterward that his ancestor was Sir Arthur Brooke of Fermanagh (1772-1843), who, after fighting against Napoleon, crossed the Atlantic with Gen. Robert Ross and a force of British regulars and marched on Washington in August, 1814. He said his ancestor, then a colonel and second in command to Ross, actually fired the White House after Dolley Madison escaped with Stuart's famous portrait of Washington.

Sir Basil told his audience he had received an invitation from Mayor Martin H. Kennelly to visit Chicago. He added, with a smile, that he expected to go to Chicago "unless in the meantime he (Kennelly) has been influenced by the mayor of New York."

This was a reference to Mayor William O'Dwyer's defiant announcement on St. Patrick's Day when he said that the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland would not be welcomed at New York's City Hall, and added: "if he is, it will be because I am dead."

Sir Basil, a man of medium height, hawk-like features and an accent more British than the popular conception of an Irish accent, praised the great contributions made by the United States to civilization and peace. He spoke fondly of the days when American soldiers were billeted in Ulster, and quoted Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as saying that "Without Northern Ireland I do not see how the American forces could have been concentrated to begin the invasion of Europe."

Sir Basil said at the outset yesterday he would not get into "controversial" matters. Later, he said it was impossible for an Irishman to avoid being controversial, and he proceeded to defend partition. He said the peace treaty of 1920 defined the borders of North Ireland, and he recalled this treaty was signed by the representatives of Eire, Northern Ireland, and the British Empire.

"I claim the right to speak for the Ulster people," he said. "They have earned your confidence, and, I believe, your admiration."

He said Ulster was determined to remain a part of the British Empire, and, as such, continue to be of great strategic value to the United States.

"We should be looked upon, though small, as allies worth keeping and allies worth helping," he said.

South American Reds Plotting 10-Nation 'Soviet,' Bolivia Says

La Paz, Bolivia, April 11 (AP).—The Bolivian government outlawed the Communist Party and "all its activities and subsidiary organizations" today.

It charged the Communists of 10 nations were conspiring to set up a South American Soviet union under a Brazilian, Luis Carlos Prestes.

The ban was officially linked to labor unrest in this Andean republic, which produces 15 percent of the world's tin and various other minerals—wolfram, silver, gold, antimony and lead.

Forty-nine labor figures were arrested last night in a police raid from which one of the wanted men, Victor Hugo Libera, escaped in an exchange of shots that killed a bystander. Police said Libera is a student Communist leader.

A police statement said Enrique Barron, an employe of the comptroller general's office, was fatally wounded in a crossfire after Libera knocked down Police Chief Donato Millan and fled.

The government said Bolivian police have found documents outlining a Communist plan to make 1950 "a decisive year" in South America.

The party is banned in Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica and Peru.

The Interior Ministry announced that Communists and elements of the National Revolutionary Movement (MNR) were planning a general strike April 17.

The Communists have had no open, formal organization here, but police said they planned to establish one. Bolivian Communists recently withdrew from the Revolutionary Left Party (PIR), declaring it was excessively moderate and "a traitor to Marxist practices."

Senate Won't Get FEPC Bill Until It Acts on Aid Extension

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Administration leaders, with the President's concurrence, yesterday decided to bring the House-passed Marshall Plan extension before the Senate ahead of the party-splitting fair-employment practices bill.

The latest delay in the often-postponed civil rights showdown was announced by Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) following separate conferences with the President and the Senate Democratic Policy Committee.

"The President thought it was more important to take up ECA than any other pending legislation," Lucas told newsmen. "That doesn't mean the President or I have lost any of our enthusiasm for bringing up FEPC. It is going to be called up and a determined effort will be made to pass it this session."

Lucas put the decision up to President Truman, it was learned, after organizations pressing for action on FEPC refused to go along with another postponement. At a Capitol conference last week they told Lucas they felt further delay would seriously impair chances of breaking up a Southern filibuster and enacting the bill this session.

On the Senate calendar since October 17, the bill originally was scheduled to follow repeal of the Federal oleo tax, as this session's No. 2 business. Instead, a Hatch

Yukio Ozaki, 91, recalled the gift today in a newspaper article. He said he'd sent the trees when mayor of Tokyo to express Japan's gratitude for President Theodore Roosevelt's mediation in the Russo-Japanese war in 1905.

Ozaki has served in every Diet (parliament) since the first in 1890.

Hecht Plans $6 Million Virginia Store

The Hecht Co. last night revealed plans to build a six-million-dollar department store in Arlington by the fall of 1951.

The firm's announcement came after a zoning meeting of the Arlington County Board at which the board rezoned a portion of an 18-acre tract proposed for the store at North Glebe rd., Wilson blvd. and Randolph st.

Hecht officials said the structure would contain "approximately" 250,000 square feet.

Parking facilities for about 2000 cars will be constructed and maintained by the firm, they said.

The six-million-dollar figure, a Hecht Co. press representative explained, includes the cost of the land and building, and an inventory for the store.

To "complement" the Hecht store, the announcement said, part of the site will be occupied "by a number of other mercantile establishments."

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co. in Washington, said the 18-acre, triangular site was chosen "because it is at the intersection of two important highways, making it accessible from any part of Virginia."

In the negotiations for the land, the Hecht Co. was represented by Milton P. Shlesinger. The George H. Rucker Co., an Arlington realty firm, with Ashton Jones, jr., as principal, were brokers in the transaction.

The Arlington County Board was unanimous in its rezoning action, based on the recommendation of the County Planning Com-

Dirksen Wins GOP Primary; To Oppose Lucas for Senate

Chicago, April 11 (AP).—Everett M. Dirksen, a former Representative in Congress, won the Republican nomination for United States Senator tonight.

His party chose him in the Illinois primary election to oppose Democratic Senator Scott Lucas in the November battle. Lucas was renominated without opposition.

Dirksen, a United States Representative from 1933 until 1949, encountered only feeble competition in his race against Lar Daly and William J. Baker, both of Chicago.

Returns from 2588 of the State's 9424 precincts gave Dirksen 132,170, Baker 38,893 and Daly 12,893.

Thus, Dirksen returned from the political arena from which he had retired while he recovered from an eye ailment.

The Illinois vote was first in a series of State primary elections that will fill out the ranks of contenders for the fall fight for control of Congress.

Representative Adolph J. Sabath, 84, a Democrat who is rounding out 44 years in Congress, was renominated in his Chicago district.

Representative C. W. (Runt) Bishop, a Republican, won renomination in a down-State district.

They were the first definite winners among the seven Congressmen who had opposition in the primary.

Lucas is President Truman's majority leader in the Senate and a top spokesman for the "Fair Deal." He has campaigned in defense of the Marshall Plan and deficit spending as necessary to avoid war and stop communism.

Soviet Tells Of Air Clash; Navy Craft Not Armed

Protest by Moscow Charges Firing 13 Miles Inside Her Latvian Territory

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Russia uncorked a first-class international mystery yesterday by alleging that an American B29-type plane had fired on Soviet fighters 13 miles inside Soviet territory on the Baltic.

A stern Soviet protest, delivered to Ambassador Alan G. Kirk in Moscow, said one of the Soviet fighters returned the fire, and the so-called American plane "turned toward the sea and disappeared."

High defense officials here indicated it might have been a Navy "Privateer" patrol craft, a single-fin version of the wartime twin-fins B-24 resembling a B-29, which has been missing since Saturday, on a training flight from Wiesbaden, Germany, to Copenhagen, Denmark.

But they could not be sure, and they offered no clew as to why the plane should have been so far off its course. The alleged incident happened last Saturday morning inside the Soviet coast line near Lipaya (Libau) in what used to be the republic of Latvia.

This is more than 350 miles east and slightly north of the missing plane's intended landing in Copenhagen. The missing craft had four officers and six enlisted men aboard, and scores of planes and ships were searching for it in vain yesterday in the Baltic waters around Denmark.

[The search has been extended to the eastern end of the Baltic outside Soviet territorial waters, the United Press reported from Copenhagen.

[Officers in charge of the search said the rescue planes were flying at about 500 feet on carefully plotted courses that enabled them to criss-cross the entire area. American, Danish, Swedish and British planes and Danish and

Noncancerous Tumor Removed From Vandenberg

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) yesterday underwent a second tumor removal operation here—but with no medical indication of cancer.

His own attending physician, Dr. Robert F. Owen, yesterday scotched earlier cancer reports that followed the first operation last October for the removal of half of Vandenberg's left lung.

At the first operation, Dr. Owen explained, a cancer diagnosis was made, but was never borne out by biopsy examination of the tissues removed. Then and since, he said, "many, many frozen sections" have been examined without the uncovering of even a trace of malignant cells.

Yesterday's operation was performed by Dr. O. Hugh Fulcher, chief of neurosurgery, at Georgetown Hospital. The tumor removed was situated near the spinal cord.

Post-operation condition of the 66-year-old Senator "is considered to be satisfactory," Dr. Owen stated.

Yesterday's operation came at a time when Vandenberg had just begun to resume an active role in the bipartisan foreign policy he steered since January, 1945.

Bridges May Stay in U. S. Indefinitely

By The Associated Press

Harry Bridges might be able to stay in this country indefinitely, even if he loses his American naturalization papers as a result of his perjury conviction.

Such a situation could arise because he will become a "stateless person" if his papers are revoked.

A "stateless" category raises problems, Government officials conceded yesterday, which could lead to complications that might endlessly delay his proposed deportation. For it would then be a question of finding a foreign country which would give him entry papers.

If no such country is found, the CIO longshoremen's leader would become a permanent "guest" in the United States, because this Government has no machinery for expelling aliens who have no place to go.

Action Awaits Appeals

The Justice Department pointed out that in the event it is upheld in moving for cancellation of the naturalization which Bridges obtained in 1945, he would become not simply an alien again, but an alien without a state because he had to renounce his Australian citizenship in order to take the naturalization oath of allegiance to this country.

The department has made it clear that the proceedings at San Francisco were intended to bring about a deportation, but officials here say there will be no move in that direction until Bridges has had the opportunity to avail himself of all legal appeals.

These might be very lengthy. Bridges' attorneys have already announced his perjury conviction and five-year sentence will be taken to the Supreme Court, by way of the Court of Appeals.

In addition, if the West Coast court cancels his citizenship, the same protracted appeals procedure up to the highest tribunal would also be available.

Should these appeals lose out, the Justice Department would then have to decide on whether to seek a deportation order or demand that he serve the five-year sentence.

This, officials say, is a bridge to be crossed when they come to it.

U. S. Move to Revoke Citizenship Delayed

San Francisco, April 11 (AP).—A move to strip Harry Bridges of American citizenship was delayed today until some time next month.

The Government today asked Federal Judge George B. Harris for an immediate order revoking Bridges' citizenship on the ground that it was obtained through fraud.

The judge heard both government attorneys and the defense, briefly, then announced he wanted more time to consider the matter.

He said he would give the Government two weeks to file briefs, then the defense will have 10 days to answer.

Honolulu, April 11 (AP).—An avowed former Communist says Communist Party members were the brains of Harry Bridges' CIO longshore union in Hawaii.

The House Un-American Activities Committee heard this testimony yesterday from Ichiro Izuka, who said he was a member of the party for 10 years until he quit in October, 1946.

The congressional group is investigating alleged Communist activity in this island territory which hopes for Statehood soon. The House has approved but the Senate has yet to act.

Izuka named Jack Hall, regional director of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was a dues-paying member of the Communist Party through June, 1946. He said he himself collected dues from Hall, Bridges' lieutenant in Hawaii.

In compliance with the Taft-Hartley Act, Hall signed a non-Communist affidavit last February 27.

After asserting he knew that Communists formulated ILWU policy in 1946, Izuka said:

"And even today they are in the saddle. They are dictating the ILWU policies."

Izuka, who said he was treasurer of the party's Waikiki cell, estimated there were about 130 party members in Hawaii in 1946. Of these, 90 percent were ILWU members, he testified.

Izuka also told the committee other dues-paying party members included Robert McElrath, ILWU publicity director; Ernest Arena, head of the ILWU's miscellaneous local; Pauline Rosenthal, ILWU office manager, and Frank Thompson, whom he called an international representative of Louis Goldblatt, ILWU secretary-treasurer.

Other testimony came from:

Tsuruo Ogoshi, who said Hall "presided and educated us in Communist party politics" in 1938. Ogoshi said he left the party after being a member a little more than one year because he felt it was not a true trade union movement.

Richard M. Kageyama, Democratic member of the Hawaiian Constitutional convention and the Honolulu City-County Board of Supervisors, who said he was a dues-paying Communist party member from February to December, 1947.

Kageyama said he had taken non-Communist oaths required by Hawaiian law for both positions at the request of William A. Wheeler, investigator for the congressional committee.

Alexandria To Close 85 Housing Units

Alexandria City Council last night agreed unanimously to a gradual closing of the Taylor Run veterans' housing development of 85 units off Duke st. in the western section of the city.

Use of the project will be discontinued as the homes are vacated and no renewals will be accepted, according to the terms of the council resolution.

The emergency for which the development was built is no longer "acute" the council ruled. The project will be demolished when the units are entirely empty.

The project consists of demountable surplus barracks type single-story buildings, branded an "eyesore" by nearby residents soon after they were opened in February, 1947. All the units are occupied at present, one-bedroom apartments at $25 a month, and two-bedroom units at $30 a month.

The Council took no action on a request from the Falls Church City Council that it name a member to a proposed committee of northern Virginia communities relative to the development of Lake Barcroft as an area park. The Council instead appointed Edward Kelly of the Planning Commission, to investigate the proposal and report.

The Council also appointed a committee of four city officials to cooperate with two historical societies to develop plans for the restoration of Ramsay House, the oldest Alexandria home still owned by the city, at the corner of Fairfax and King sts. City Manager A. Guy Ancell, Building Inspector A. R. Lash, and Councilmen James M. Duncan, jr., and Roy Bragg will work with the Alexandria association, which already has raised $9000 for restoration, and the Alexandria Historical Society.

said he would produce a witness—now identified as Budenz—who was high in Communist Party ranks, whose job it was to know who were Communists, and who knew Lattimore to be a Communist and subject to the party's discipline.

McCarthy also mentioned other prospective witnesses and affiants, whom he did not identify either. But apparently he has not given their names to the Senate investigating subcommittee.

Its chairman, Senator Tydings (D., Md.), said that as far as he knew, Budenz was the only name McCarthy had so far given the subcommittee.

Its counsel, Edward P. Morgan, wrote McCarthy yesterday that, on unanimous action of the subcommittee members, McCarthy would be given until April 19 to submit all further information he had to offer and names of all other witnesses he wanted called, in connection with his charges against Lattimore and Communist infiltration in the State Department.

Terminal Date on Testimony

This suggested that the subcommittee is anxious to begin putting a terminal date on future testimony rather than leaving the proceedings indefinitely open-ended.

In another development yesterday, William J. Goodwin, a registered lobbyist for Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalist Government, sent a telegram to the Associated Press saying he is ready to appear before the Senate committee "to answer the charges leveled against me by Mr. Lattimore."

Lattimore, in one of his angry replies to McCarthy, had accused the Wisconsin Senator of being a "willing tool of the China lobby" and named Goodwin as the chief lobbyist trying to swing congressional aid to Nationalist China.

Goodwin said he had been released at his request from his duties as public relations counsel to the Chinese news service and would testify "without restriction of diplomatic courtesy and protocol."

Meanwhile, Senator Green (D., R. I.) read to the Senate a letter that cast doubt on a statement McCarthy made—and emphasized at length—in a Senate speech.

McCarthy said he had sought information from the Library of Congress about Lattimore's recent trip to Afganistan. The library told him, McCarthy said, that the Afghanistan government asked the United States to send an economic mission there, and that the State Department picked Lattimore.

McCarthy repeated this information about six times in his speech, in attepting to show a close connection between Lattimore and the State Department.

Green Wrote Library

Green wrote the Library of Congress to ask whether this was true. Librarian Luther H. Evans replied in a letter Green inserted in the Congressional Record.

It said that "the Library of Congress knows of no information to the effect that the Afghanistan government ever made a request to the State Department in relation to the Owen Lattimore mission," or that the State Department was consulted about it or ever recommended Lattimore.

On the contrary, Evans continued, it was the library's understanding that the Afghanistan request was made to the United Nations and that Lattimore was chosen as one of the members of the mission by the United Nations secretariat.

Atom Research Plan Support Sought Here

Dr. Alexander C. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan last night appealed for support for a privately-backed program of research into peacetime application of atomic energy.

Speaking at a dinner of the Michigan alumni club of Washington at the Officers' Club of Bethesda Naval Hospital, Dr. Ruthven said such research can be accomplished more efficiently and more quickly in private hands than under Federal control.

The university is seeking $6,500,000 from its alumni for the project. It will be a memorial dedicated to Michigan students and alumni who died during World War II and will be called the Phoenix project.

"The beneficial possibilities of atomic energy far outweigh its destructive effects, but if we sit around and talk about how atomic bombs, or hydrogen bombs will wipe out our civilization and fail to do something about it, it may happen," Dr. Ruthven said.

"Our job is to drive ahead with the development of useful and humanitarian applications of this vast new force so that the world will not allow it to be wasted as a weapon of war," he added.

Dr. Ruthven is on a nationwide speaking tour in an effort to interest Michigan alumni in the plan. He conferred with Sumner T. Pike, acting chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission yesterday and is due to call on President Truman today.

Catholic Library Unit Opens Parley

The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Catholic Library Association opened yesterday at Catholic University, with an early morning mass and a full day of discussions.

An estimated 300 librarians have enrolled in the four-day conference.

Miss M. Clare Ruppert, acting central librarian of the Washington Public Library, and the Rev. Sebastian F. Miklas, O. F. M., of Capuchin College, Washington, participated in a roundtable on "Library Service to Catholic Readers" last night at the St. Matthew's Study Guild Library, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw.

John O'Connor, professor of history at Georgetown University, lectured on "Rome, the Source of Peace."

The conference continues today with roundtable discussions scheduled on college, hospital, and elementary school libraries, and cataloguing.

Thomas McDermott, author of "Certainlly I Am a Catholic," will speak on "Literature and the Catholic Citizen" at 12:30 p. m. in the graduate dining room.

The theme of the conference is "The Catholic Librarian's Role in the Peace Plan."

Farm Safety Week

Teachers' Use As 'Informers' Laid to Board

Philadelphia, April 11 (AP).—Attorneys for Dorothy Albert, suspended Pittsburgh high school teacher, today accused the Pittsburgh school board of forcing teachers to "become informers on their more liberal colleagues."

Attorney Hymen Schlesinger said the school board seeks "to set off a witch-hunt."

"Throughout the entire public school system, school teachers and principals will become informers on their more liberal colleagues," Schlesinger told the Third United States Circuit Court of Appeals, "to curry favor or to save their own skins."

The attorney appeared before the court to seek a temporary injunction restraining the school board from a hearing for the 43-year-old teachedr today on charges of being a Communist.

She was named by Matthew Cvetic—self-described Federal Bureau of Investigation agent to investigate Communists—as being a party member. This Miss Albert denied.

Schlesinger sought to have the school board hearing held up until after a special three-judge panel appointed by the Circuit Court can inquire into Miss Albert's charges that her constitutional rights have been violated.

The hearing by the statutory court appointed by Judge John Biggs, jr., senior jurist of the Third Circuit Court, into the unconstitutionality charges will be the first since the Cvetic accusations were made. It is to be held Friday in Pittsburgh.

Arlington Democrats To Hear Legislators

Welsh Field Title Transfer Is Postponed

The Montgomery County Board of Education yesterday postponed action on a request by the County Council to transfer to it title to Welsh Field as a location for a new county office building in Rockville.

The board informed County Manager Irving G. McNayr, who appeared at yesterday's meeting, that all transfers of school property must be approved by the State superintendent of schools.

McNayr told the board that construction of the new building bould not be begun before late fall and that the Richard Montgomery high school could continue to use the athletic field through the fall sport season.

The board announced the appointment of Edward A. Burnap of 4010 Lair pl., Chevy Chase, as director of school construction. Burnap has operated his own construction company since 1942 and numbers among his projects three dormitories and several other buildings at the University of Maryland.

CIO Group Is Trying Communications Unit

The CIO yesterday began trying one of its unions, the American Communications Association, for allegedly following the Communist party line instead of CIO policy.

Closed hearings on the charges were started by a special three-man committee, which will hold a similar hearing next week for the CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union.

The CIO Executive Board, which has the sole power to revoke an affiliate's charter, already has ousted six unions from the parent organization.

Radio Producer Kills Himself

New York, April 11 (AP)—Hugh B. (Bud) Ernst, man-about-town radio producer, killed himself with a shotgun today as his estranged wife, actress Betty Furness, telephoned his hotel room in the frantic hope of stopping him.

The 39-year-old former Army flier telephoned the New York Journal-American only a few minutes earlier that he was despondent over the breakup of his marriage to Miss Furness.

"I'm at the end of my rope," Ernst said. "If you want a story, come up and get it."

Neil Maguire of the newspaper's city desk kept Ernst talking while Miss Furness—Ernst's fourth wife—and the hotel management were notified. A reporter and photographer also rushed to the hotel. They were too late.

Detectives found Ernst's body, shot through the roof of the mouth, sprawling from one of the twin beds in the elegantly furnished Hotel Westbury room. A new 20-gauge shotgun and a box of shells lay near by. A clipping of a Broadway column reporting that Ernst and Miss Furness were planning divorce also was found in the room.

Ernst and Miss Furness were married in 1945, divorced a year later and remarried three weeks after the divorce. His previous wives were Ziegfeld Follies beauty Althea Henley, Polish-born screen star Lyda Roberti and Gwynne Pickford, niece of Mary Pickford.

WHY KHAKI?
The United States armed forces are indebted to the British for the khaki color used for the summer military uniform. For years the British armies used white for the summer uniforms. But when the British Empire's troops went to India, they found that the white uniforms made excellent targets. They, therefore, dipped them all in a type of mud which bore the local Hindu name of "Khak." Since then the name "Khaki"—mud color—has been applied to the summer military uniform.

Thailand Reports $10 Million U. S. Aid

Bangkok, April 11 (AP).—The United States has granted 10 million dollars worth of arms and other military aid to a Thailand threatened by communism, Premier Pibul Songgram disclosed today.

This was the first concrete manifestation of decisions reached at the Bangkok conference in February.

Philip C. Jessup, United States Ambassador-at-Large, set forth the United States position there of giving military assistance to Asian nations displaying the will to stand against the Communist tide.

Under Songgram's leadership, the tiny kingdom of Thailand has taken its place alongside democratic powers in the cold war against communism. The war is more hot than cold in southeast Asia, which lies athwart the mighty new Communist nation of China and itself is riddled with Reds.

The military aid in the form of arms as well as equipment such as bulldozers to build badly needed military roads in north Thailand was given to help the government resist infiltration by Communists, the premier said.

(In Washington the State Department declined to comment on Songgram's statement.)

At Naples

Italy Unloads Pact Arms; Reds Quiet

Naples, Italy, April 11 (AP).—The first shipment of Atlantic Pact arms for Italy arrived in this closely guarded port from the United States tonight and unloading began without incident.

Threatened Communist protest demonstrations failed to materialize.

The arms—mostly howitzers and other mountain equipment—arrived on the freighter Exilona from New York. The unloading was done by non-Communist dockhands, belonging mainly to the right-wing Socialist labor unions.

The army and police took the strictest security precautions in the dock area since the war. Every gate along the 4 miles of post area was sealed off by troops. No one, including newspapermen and photographers, was allowed to enter.

The American Consulate said no United States representatives were present. A few ranking officers of the Italian services were on hand when the ship docked.

Sentinels were posted along the rail line from Naples to the undisclosed destination of the arms.

First Ground Arms Aid Due in France Today

Paris, April 11 (NYHT).—The American Importer, carrying the first ground arms given France under the mutual defense assistance program, is due at Cherbourg Wednesday.

The Communist press today called on followers to "contribute all our strength" against the importation of Atlantic Pact arms.

Indonesian Revolt Ends In Surrender

Jakarta, United States of Indonesia, April 11 (AP).—The week-old military revolt in the Celebese Island port of Makassar has ended, Defense Minister Sultan Hamengku Buwono announced tonight.

Buwono said in a broadcast Captain Andi Abdul Aziz has called off the rebellion, confined the dissident troops to barracks, released prisoners and returned seized arms.

Other officials of the United States of Indonesia said the capitulation came after a battalion of federal troops, held at sea five days by the revolt, landed secretly in the night and stood ready to attack Makassar.

A scheduled broadcast by President Soekarno was to have been the signal for the attack. Word of the rebel leader's decision to end the uprising came from Makassar a half-hour before the time for the broadcast.

The rebellion began Wednesday when Aziz, supported by his Indonesian troops formerly in the Dutch army, seized the port to prevent the landing of the federal troops.

Maritime Unit Hit for Loss On Bills Due

By The Associated Press

A Senate investigation subcommittee yesterday accused the Maritime Commission of "inept handling" of delinquent wartime shipping accounts totaling more than 39 million dollars.

The subcommittee said this would result in an undetermined financial loss to the Government. The Senators held lengthy hearings last year on Maritime Commission operations.

The report was made to the Senate by Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.), who said in a statement:

"The manner in which the Maritime Commission handled this very large backlog of delinquent accounts receivable, prior to the subcommittee's investigation, is an example of inefficiency which should not be tolerated in Government."

The committee reported the backlog of accounts once was $39,198,850 due from other Government agencies, private companies and foreign governments.

As a result of the investigation, Hoey said, $6,380,497 has been collected, and waiver agreements involving delinquent accounts totaling $10,010,981 were reached between the commission and other United States agencies.

This left the commission with more than $22,800,000 of uncollected bills growing out of the war, the report showed.

The subcommittee flatly rejected the commission's claim that personnel cutbacks necessitated discontinuation of its accounts-receivable project in 1947.

It said the collections of more than six million dollars since the investigation have been made without additional personnel and with no apparent neglect of other auditing functions.

The Senators said remaining overdue accounts have been made a part of the regular work of the commission and it is expected the entire backlog will be cleared up as soon as possible.

Korea Sets Election

Seoul, Korea, April 11 (AP).—The Ministry of Home Affairs announced today the Korean general election probably will be held May 30. United States Secretary of State Acheson insisted last week upon early elections and a balanced budget as requirements for continued United States aid.

Gusts Blow Cool Weather Into District

Gusts of up to 53 miles an hour lashed at the District last night, ushering in what the Weather Bureau predicts will be two days of cool weather.

Forecasters said temperatures today should rise from an overnight low of 38 degrees to an afternoon high of about 55. Yesterday's top was 71 degrees at 3:10 p. m., and the day's low was 43 at 5:45 a. m.

Today will be mostly sunny with winds of from 20 to 30 miles an hour. Thursday should be fair and with little change in temperature.

While the cool weather was good news for the National Capital Park experts on the cherry trees, there was some danger that the wind might undo the good.

George Harding, chief horticulturist for National Capital Parks, reported that the trees yesterday were in full bloom. About 5000 viewed them.

Weather conditions, he reported, would determine whether the blossoms would last through the weekend.

The heaviest gust—53 miles an hour—at 8:55 p. m. felled a large tree in front of 18th st. ne., blocking off traffic. A Sea Scout boat was torn loose from its moorings near the Sousa Bridge in the Anacostia.

At the city's National shrines, an attendance of 5287 was reported at the Washington Monument, with 4842 visitors reported at the Jefferson Memorial and 11,707 at the Lincoln Memorial.

For the youngsters, it was still a holiday. The District Recreation Department announced the following schedule at playgrounds and recreation centers for today:

Senate Won't Get FEPC Bill Until It Acts on Aid Extension

Act amendment, the women's equal rights amendment, the Kerr natural gas bill, middle income housing and flood control bills were given priority in a series of postponements.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) charged the latest delay involved a political decision" to put off the civil rights test until after the May 2 Southern primaries but Lucas told newsmen the primaries had "nothing to do with it."

Senator Claude Pepper's seat is at stake in the May 2 Florida primary and in Alabama the National Democratic organization and the rebel States Rights forces are facing a factional showdown.

"They're more anxious to beat the Dixiecrats than to pass FEPC," Wherry told reporters. "The bill should have been called up at the start of the session. Each postponement makes it that much more difficult to pass a civil rights bill."

Lucas told reporters, however, that he still hoped to get the bill up in the Senate before May 2.

Lucas contended that "timing" of the civil rights test wasn't nearly so important as making a "hard-hitting fight when we get it to the floor." In any event, he said, he wants to pass a bill with more teeth in it than the watered-down voluntary FEPC measure which passed the House.

House-Type Bill for GOP

Leading Senate Republicans are supporting a House-type FEPC, modeled along lines of a voluntary bill introduced by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio)., Republican votes for cloture on such a measure are now being canvassed.

Before the party policy huddle at the Capitol, Lucas and Vice President Barkley spent nearly an hour at the White House reviewing the legislative program with the President.

Despite the thin flow of legislative grist to the White House Lucas said the President seemed "pretty well satisfied" with what has been accomplished and what is in prospect.

He predicted a larger portion of Mr. Truman's program will be enacted than most people think and recalled: "We were in the same position last year when a lot of people said we were not going to get anywhere."

Predicts Many Will Pass

Here are some of the bills Lucas predicted will be enacted before Congress adjourns: Marshall Plan funds and military aid to Atlantic Pact nations, increased social security benefits, rent control extension, elimination of some wartime excises and a 50 percent reduction in others, about 90 percent of the President's reorganization program, and increased borrowing power for the Commodity Credit Corporation. He indicated the Commodity Credit bill will be called up in the Senate right after ECA, requiring a further postponement of FEPC.

Lucas granted that no action was likely this session on compulsory health insurance, the Brannan farm subsidy plan, or repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act but refused to rule out ultimate House action on Federal aid-to-education legislation.

"That isn't out in the cold—it certainly is a possibility," he said.

He said the politically-hot Kerr natural gas bill was discussed "in a general way" with the President, but Mr. Truman did not indicate whether he would sign or veto the bill.

Bevin Enters Hospital For Minor Operation

London, April 11 (NYHT.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin entered a hospital today to undergo a minor operation. Foreign Office sources said the operation is not connected with Bevin's heart ailment.

Although the Foreign Office said Bevin expects to be back at work in about two weeks, his health is known to be causing serious concern. His doctor often attends the House of Commons to watch over Bevin during his long and difficult speeches.

U. S. Rejects London Dollar Crisis Study

By The Associated Press

The United States has ruled against any detailed review of Britain's dollar crisis when the big three Foreign Ministers meet in London next month.

Informed Government officials said yesterday that Secretary of State Dean Acheson has notified the British he considers any such talks to be "inappropriate" at that time.

Acheson is reported ready, however, to talk about Britain's financial outlook in general terms, as it affects the numerous political issues to be discussed.

The Secretary is tentatively scheduled to leave for Europe by plane May 7. He plans to spend two days in Paris meeting with French Foreign Minister Schuman and then go on to London.

British Foreign Minister Bevin suggested expanding the discussions recently to include a new look at Britain's dollar problem.

American officials said Acheson opposed such a move for these reasons:

1. His stay in London would be too short to do a thorough job of examining the complicated British financial and trade situations.

2. A review would mean bringing over at least a score of Government officials from the various agencies that must be consulted before decisions could be made.

3. Britain and the United States could make little progress on the problem without Canadian participation, since Canada's economy is directly involved.

Topics on the Foreign Ministers' agenda have never been made public. Officials working on it, however, said it seems now as if they will be discussing a dozen or more problems ranging from Germany to the Far East.

The most critical of these is expected to be the future of western Germany, including plans for the Saar and the Ruhr. High on the list will be the threatened Communist demonstrations in Berlin late in May.

Red Youths Plan March Through All Berlin Monday

Berlin, April 11 (AP).—Communist youth leaders announced plans today to parade through all Berlin Monday in defiance of the Western Allies.

The announcement was made through the Soviet-licensed ADN news agency a few hours after the return of East German Deputy Premier Walter Ulbright from Moscow.

Political observers had speculated that he discussed in Moscow the Communists' planned march of 500,000 youths into West Berlin, scheduled for May 27-30.

The announcement said next week's march will be made by the Falken (Falcons), an organization of Communist youth. It said the march was to protest recent arrests of Communists in West Berlin.

2 Ministers Out In Yugoslavian Cabinet Shakeup

London, April 11 (AP).—Yugoslavia announced today a sweeping government reshuffle in which two former ministers wound up without jobs.

At the same time six federal economic ministries were abolished and "councils" headed by chairmen who are cabinet members were set up in their place.

Veceslav Holtevac, Minister for Newly Liberated Regions, was appointed Minister of Labor; Vlada Zecevic, Minister of Construction, became Minister of Communications, and Dr. Vasa Cubrilovic, Minister of Forestry, became Minister President of the Federal Agricultural Committee.

The official news agency Tanjug said the ministries abolished are Agriculture, Forestry, Light Industry, Building, Trade and Supply and State Purchases.

U. S. Hails Gonzalez As a Good Neighbor

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Official Washington will put especial warmth into its welcome to President Gonzalez Videla of Chile this afternoon.

The government here admires him as a militant anti-Communist, a good neighbor and a good ally in the cold war—and as one of the comparatively few Latin-American leaders who has tried to make democracy work.

He has won a golden reputation in this country for keeping his army under civilian control, for holding free elections, for encouraging free expression and for sticking to democratic processes—except where Communists are concerned.

Since 1947 he has gone after the Communists with an iron hand, even though he was elected in 1946 with Communist support and had Communists in his cabinet for a time.

10% Chileans Are Reds

About 10 percent of Chile's people are estimated to be Communists, most of them in the hot and treeless copper-mining country of Chile's north. Nevertheless Gonzalez has stricken all known Communists from the electoral rolls and has harassed the Communist press without let-up.

In international affairs his government has broken relations with Russia and her satellites, and Chilean delegates in the United Nations have been in the forefront of the anti-Soviet lineup. If a country's attitude toward communism is a test of its worth in North American eyes, than Chile qualifies handsomely.

But there are other reasons, personal and political, why there will be unusual warmth behind the pomp and ceremony that go with state visits of this kind.

Americans who have seen the president at close range regard him as one of the consummate politicians of the hemisphere, one who has won the support of virtually every political party except the Communists.

Established Sound Relations

They also credit him with having put relations with the United States on a sound and cooperative basis, the soundest they have ever been in the history of the two countries.

The President is not coming here for a loan. His country has had 141 billion dollars from the Export-Import Bank since 1939, 16 million from the World Bank, and 80 million from the Marshall Plan for copper, nitrates and other goods for Europe—a sizable total for a country with only about five million people.

If anything economic is on the President's mind as he comes here, it is copper, not cash or credits. For Chile is anxious to see the United States extend its present tariff exemption of Chilean copper, one of the major props of the country's economy.

The exemption under existing law expires June 30, but a bill introduced in the House by Representative James T. Patterson (R., Conn.) would extend the duty-free treatment another two years. The Administration favors it, but Western copper mining interests oppose it.

So far neither the House Ways and Means Committee nor the Senate Finance Committee has acted on the proposal, but the Chileans hope that their President's visit may hasten action on it.

The United States, for its part, would like to see Chile negotiate and sign a treaty guaranteeing fair treatment to American investors. Uruguay has already signed such a treaty, and the Administration here is eager to see other American republics do the same.

The Chileans, however, are not enthusiastic about it. Their argument is that they have treated American investors fairly for a long time, and that they do not need to sign a treaty to demonstrate their good faith. Some Chilean officials believe it would be a reflection on them to ask them to negotiate such a treaty.

They are a proud and independent people who like to stand on their own feet. Sometimes their pride gets in the way of American policy, even though American officials admire it and respect it.

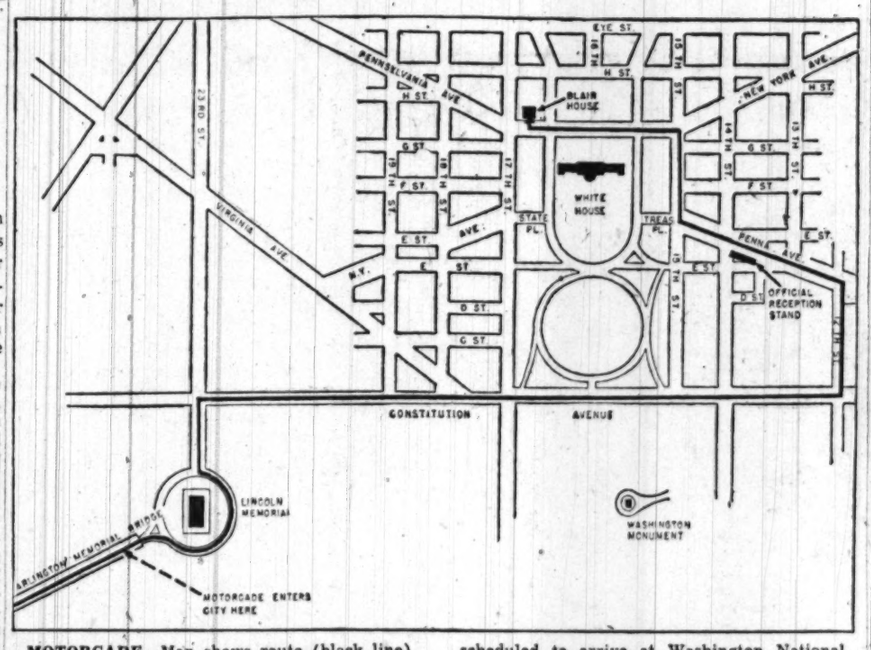

The best recent example was the discovery of oil in Magellanes, the southernmost state of Chile in the cold and rainy region near the Straits of Magellan. Until now Chile has had plenty of coal of mediocre quality, but has had to import all her oil.

Now she can produce about 2000 barrels a day, and seems likely to meet all her needs from her own production. American oil companies, with American government support, would like to develop and operate this new oilfield according to the old formula of concession rights and royalties.

But the Chileans believe they have the skill and capacity to operate this field themselves. They already have the world's second biggest cement plant, they will have a big steel mill of their own by next winter, and they have made giant strides in industrialization in other fields.

What they need now is an oil refinery to handle the Magellanes product, and the prospect is that they will buy refinery equipment here and operate it themselves.

2 Bills Offered To Cut Leave In U. S. Jobs

Senator Douglas (D., Ill.), yesterday introduced two bills aimed at cutting down the vacations and sick leaves of Federal employes.

One bill would reduce from 26 to 20 working days a year the vacations now given most Government workers outside the postal service. Their sick leave would be cut from 15 to 12 days.

At the same time, the vacations of postal workers would be raised from 15 to 20 days and sick leave from 10 to 12 days.

The second, alternative bill also would equalize sick leave but base vacations on the length of an employe's service. Those with less than three years' service would get 10 days, or two weeks.

Snyder Disagrees With Truman Plan

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Secretary of the Treasury yesterday told the Senate he disagreed with President Truman's plan to make the office of Comptroller of the Currency a part of the Treasury Department.

His statement was sent to the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department, which is hearing testimony on the Administration's Reorganization Plan No. 1.

Fredericyk J. Lawton, assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget, nominated to be Budget Director, supported the President's proposed shift.

The Comptroller's Office now is a separate Government agency, responsible to Congress. Its function is the regulation of national banks.

Snyder told the committee:

"In the course of his duties, the Comptroller of the Currency exercises a number of quasi-judicial powers of great importance. In my judgment, it is highly desirable that all such functions in this field should be performed by an official whose duties are definitely and permanently related to the National Banking System alone. It should be borne in mind that under present law the Comptroller performs his duties "under the general directions of the Secretary of the Treasury," and this provides an entirely adequate integration of the general policies of the Bureau with those of the Department.

Present Basis Beneficial

"If Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1950 becomes effective, I would use my full powers thereunder to preserve the continuity of this Bureau in all possible respects, in order to maintain a situation which, in my opinion, is most beneficial both to the National Banking System and to the general economy. However, it must be borne in mind that my policy in this respect would not necessarily be maintained by future Secretaries of the Treasury.

"It is my firm conviction that a vigorous national banking system is essential to the economy of this country. It not only acts as a pacemaker, as I intimated above, for the State banking systems, but also serves to provide competition for those systems, and hence increases their strength as it increases its own. It is also my belief that the national banking system would not long remain intact, strong and vigorous without leadership by the Bureau of the Comptroller of the Currency, which has no other function than its supervision and administration.

"The preservation of that system is more important than creating a new channel of authority where no need therefor appears."

"Line of Responsibility"

Lawton told the committee that while he "might well agree" that the functions of the Comptroller of the Currency should remain by order of the Secretary vested in the Comptroller, "I feel that the line of responsibility running from the President to the Secretary of the Treasury to the Comptroller of the Currency should be clearly drawn as provided in the plan."

The Senate Banking Committee last week disapproved the plan. Two of its members, Senators A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) and Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) yesterday testified against it.

Robertson said it would "relegate the Comptroller to messenger boy status."

Capehart recommended the plan be disapproved. It would not serve the public interest, he said.

In a letter to the Expenditures group, Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) outlined the Banking group's opposition. He said the shift would be "a step toward destroying the dual banking system."

The reorganization law provides that unless either house of Congress disapproves a plan within 60 days after its submission it automatically becomes law. The Treasury plan was one of 21 submitted by the President March 13.

Sex Crimes, Cause and Penalty, Debated by Panel on WTOP

A group of Government, religious and medical experts disagreed last night on the causes of sex crimes and the treatment which should be given adult offenders.

During a program over Station WTOP, Representative Frank I. Chelf (D., Ky.) recommended "sure, sudden, stiff" penalties as the "greatest deterrent" for potential sex criminals. He said some offenders might be mentally ill, but that most are encouraged by weak laws.

United States Judge Alexander Holtzoff agreed with Chelf that society must be protected by prescribing sentences in other than "ordinary" penitentiaries for offenders. But he said this time should be used for psychiatric treatment.

Others who thought the problem is primarily a question of ironing out mental quirks included James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons; Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Dr. Overholser summed up their position by observing that "many of these offenders are quite pathological people" who should be given mental treatment. But, he added, all such criminals could not be regarded in this way.

The Rev. Francis Connell, Catholic University professor of moral theology, took a different tack. He said the problem basically is "not psychiatric, but moral." He asserted "sin is not mental illness," and said "most sex offenses are based upon the free and deliberate choice of those who commit them.

Another churchman, Dr. Frederick Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, said sex crimes stem mainly from faulty home education in such matters. He urged parents to deal "honestly and intelligently" with the problem of sex information.

Convicted Sex Offenders May Be Jailed in N. Y.

Albany, N. Y., April 11 (U.P.).—Convicted sex offenders are subject to prison sentences ranging from one day to life under legislation approved tonight by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

The measure was an outgrowth of a two-year study of 102 Sing Sing prison inmates and other sex offenders. Length of sentence will depend on repeated psychiatric examinations to discover whether the offender has been cured.

The new law applies to persons guilty of sex crimes involving violence or the abuse of children. Such persons will be given an immediate psychiatric examination, followed by an indeterminate sentence ranging from one day to life.

New Rules Permit Car Owners Two Registration Cards

Changes in Vehicle and Title Registration Regulations approved by the Commissioners yesterday will permit car owners to obtain two registration cards for the vehicles.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp told the Commissioners many persons dislike leaving the cards in their cars for fear of theft. He recommended the extra card so both husband and wife could carry their own.

Other regulations changes recommended by Keneipp and approved by the Commissioners:

(1) Allow a District resident purchasing a vehicle elsewhere to obtain District tags for it before bringing it here. Previously, a person buying a car outside the District had to buy tags in the State where he bought it in order to drive it here, have it inspected and buy new tags. That meant he paid for two sets of tags, Keneipp said.

(2) Prohibit attaching to license tag brackets signs larger than 24 square inches. Keneipp said the fad of installing large advertising signs and emblems has made it difficult to read license numbers.

(3) Change the wording used in titling out-of-State vehicles so that a relatively new car registered here for the first time will be called "retitled" rather than "used." Keneipp said owners complain that referring to a car only a few months old as "used" reduces its market value.

(4) Forbid dealers to allow persons not having drivers' permits to operate vehicles bearing dealers' tags. The courts have tried several such cases recently, Keneipp said.

Father and Daughter Face Statutory Charge

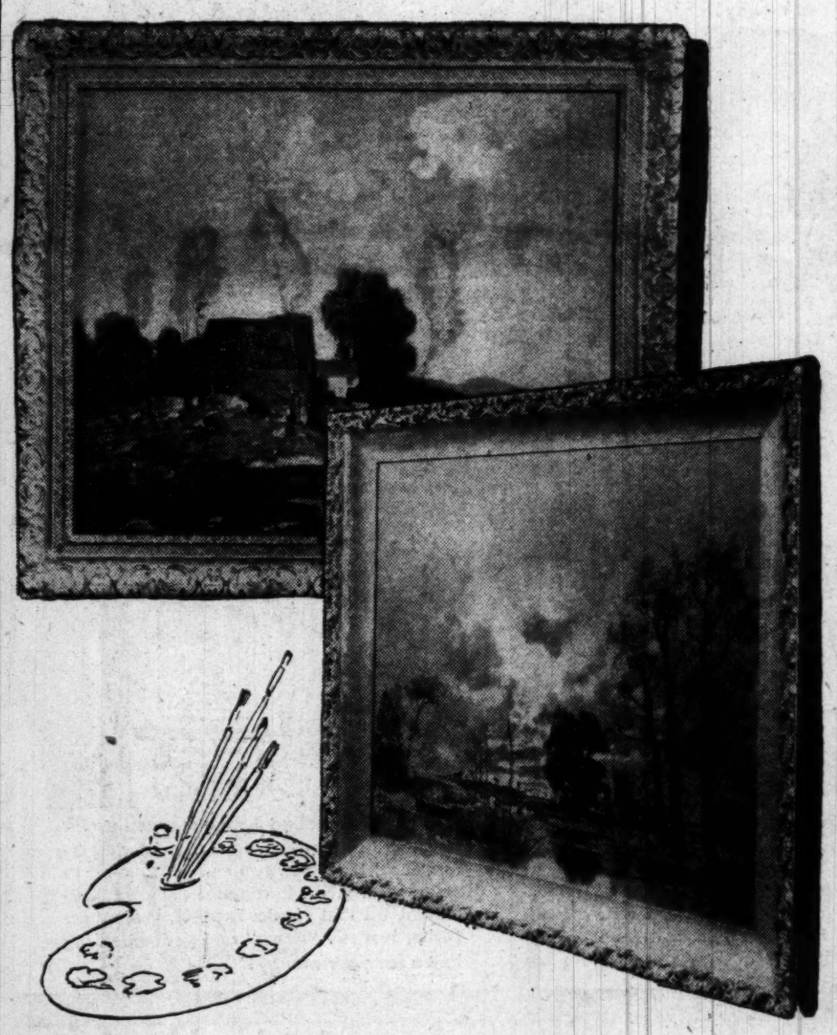

A Washington father and his 18-year-old daughter were arraigned in Municipal Court yesterday on charges of incest.

Lawrence Theodore Tinsman, 47, 2919 M st. nw., was held under $2500 bond, and Betty Jean Tinsman, under $1000 bond, and their case continued until today. Complainant was Elizabeth P. Blanchette, with whom, police said, Tinsman has been living at 1361 Girard st. nw.

Soviet Note Reports U. S.-Red Clash in Air

Swedish naval vessels continued the search; 25 American planes, some sent from as far as the mid-Atlantic Azores Islands, were included.

[Authorities at Copenhagen said the search would continue for 20 days.]

The State and Defense Departments promptly began inquiries, for this kind of incident, if it really happened, could have serious international consequences.

It is a violation of international law for a military plane to fly over foreign territory without permission, and it is doubly a violation if the intruding plane is armed and uses its guns.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, said firmly last night that the missing plane was not armed, although informants at Wiesbaden said one of its officers may have carried a .45-calibre pistol.

"An unarmed Navy patrol plane left Wiesbaden at 1031 on 8 April for a routine training flight with the intention of landing at Copenhagen," Sherman said.

"The patrol plane reported by radio crossing the coastline two and a half hours later. No further report has been received from the patrol plane or its occupants.

"A first class Petty Officer, Stephen J. Zacklin, who was a member of the normal crew of the patrol plane, had been left at Wiesbaden because of illness. He has verified the fact that the patrol plane was unarmed. The patrol plane, therefore, could not have fired on any other aircraft or returned the fire of [redacted] aircraft.

"Standing orders governing the operation of naval patrol planes in that region require that they stay well clear of the territory and territorial waters of Russia and Russian satellites.

"There were four officers and six naval enlisted men on board the patrol plane when it took off. An extensive search has been conducted by aircraft of the Air Force and the Navy without finding a trace of the missing aircraft."

Moscow reported the incident occurred about 4 hours and 40 minutes from the time the Navy plane took off from Wiesbaden. This would have been normal flying time to the Latvian coast if the plane had been off its course.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg commander of the Air Force, said last night that "no Air Force aircraft has been involved in any firing incident such as described."

"The Air Force had no four-engine bombers in the Baltic area on the 8th of April," he said, "nor are there any Air Force aircraft of that type missing."

As for the State Department, it could only say that it had received the Russian protest, as relayed by Kirk, and at once got in touch with Defense Department officials. Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the State Department was leaving no stone unturned to get to the bottom of the affair.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's only response to reporters was: "I can't say anything about it until I have more information about it."

As a sign that the Soviet government took the incident seriously, Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky summoned Ambassador Kirk and delivered the protest personally.

In Soviet eyes the gravity of the alleged incident was all the greater because it took place in the Baltic area, one of the most secret and jealously guarded parts of the Soviet Union.

Soviet armies occupied the Baltic republics in 1940, were driven out by the Nazis in 1941, and reoccupied them, with severe repression of the people there, in 1944 and 1945.

The United States has never recognized their annexation, and still recognizes a Latvian minister in Washington. But, apart from diplomatic formalities, the United States and its armed forces know that this is Soviet territory.

Members of the American embassy staff in Moscow have not been allowed to visit these formerly independent and fiercely anti-Soviet areas. Reporters from the outer world have, of course, been barred. There have been well authenticated reports of wholesale purges and deportations of the survivors into the interior of Russia, and of their replacement by Russians.

Occasionally a tiny ship filled with refugees reaches Scandinavia, and sometimes risks the Atlantic crossing to the United States. But the Baltic states, once a thriving corner of Europe, are now shut off almost as effectively as if they were in mid-Siberia.

Lepaya, where the alleged violation occurred, used to be a German naval base in the days of the Kaiser, then became one of Latvia's chief seaports, and now is believed to be the headquarters of the Soviet Baltic fleet. Foreign ships are not allowed to land there.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said yesterday he was certain "that if any American military plane flew over Russia it was by accident and not by design."

Co-Pilot Seeschaf Lived in Fairlington

Co-pilot of the missing B-29 was Lieut. Howard W. Seeschaf, 27, who lived at 3463-A S. Stafford st. Fairlington, Va. for several months while stationed here as a language student.

Lieutenant Seeschaf and his wife, who was employed by the Navy Bureau of Personnel here until last Friday, were married last November and lived at the Fairlington address until he was reassigned about six weeks ago, friends said.

A veteran of the Navy Air Transport Service in the Pacific during the last part of the war and for a year after the war, Lieutenant Seeschaf was sent from here to the Naval Air Base at Port Lyautey, French Morocco, the Navy said.

LIEUT. HOWARD SEESCHAF

Lieutenant Seeschaf attended City College of New York, leaving to enter the Navy for pilot training in May, 1943. He is a Bronx native. He received training in Pensacola and Atlanta before being assigned to the NATS in February, 1945.

He was assigned to a naval training course at Brown University in September, 1947, and in July, 1948, was assigned to the general line school at Newport, R. I. He came to Washington about a year ago.

Mrs. Seechaf, who joined the Bureau of Personnel in March, 1947, lived at 500 N. Kenmore st., Arlington, after her husband was assigned to French Morocco.

Text of Moscow's Protest

Moscow, April 11 (U.P.).—The text of a note handed to United States Ambassador Alan G. Kirk by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky follows:

"The government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics deems it necessary to state to the Government of the United States of America the following:

"According to verified data, on April 8 of this year, at 17 hours 39 minutes (5:39 p.m. Russian time—9:39 a.m. EST), south of Libava, Latvia, a four-engined military plane of the B-29 type bearing American identification marks was sighted. The plane penetrated the territory of the Soviet Union to a distance of 21 kilometers (13 miles).

"Owing to the fact that the American plane continued to penetrate into Soviet territory, a flight of Soviet fighters took off from a nearby airdrome and demanded that the American plane follow it and land at the airdrome. The American plane not only failed to comply with this demand but opened fire on the Soviet planes.

"Owing to this, an advance Soviet fighter was forced to open fire in reply, after which the American plane turned toward the sea and disappeared.

"The Soviet government announces its resolute protest to the Government of the United States against this gross violation of the Soviet frontier by an American military plane, which at the same time constitutes an unheard-of violation of the elementary rules of international law."

Hopalong Cassidy Sues Music Publisher

Los Angeles, April 11 (AP).—Bill Boyd, better known as Hopalong Cassidy, filed suit today to prevent a music publisher from using his nickname in the song, "I'll tell Hoppy on You."

Boyd contends he was given exclusive right to the western character in 1936 by Clarence E. Mulford, novelist. The suit was directed against Piantadosi Music Publications and Society Records.

Arnold Union to Ask Fare Hike Revocation

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Union employes of the Arnold bus line today will ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to rescind the 5-cent boost in fares on the ground that the company got the increase through "fraud."

The unprecedeted action before the ICC will be taken by Local 1079, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL).

The union charges that the Arnold line—Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co.—won its fare hike principally through the argument that the transit concern needed the additional income to carry out an arbitration award of 17-cents-an-hour pay raise for its 280 union employes.

Renege Charged

Yesterday, H. J. Harris, president of the local, asserted that the Arnold firm had reneged on its "promise" to pay the wage increase. Harris said that the transit line offered to add 10 cents an hour to wage, beginning now, but insisted it can't afford to pay the 17 cents retroactive to May 18 according to the terms.

Manuel J. Davis, general counsel for the bus line, confirmed Harris' report that the company had offered to settle the dispute with the union for 10 cents an hour, without retroactivity.

Davis said he informed union officials in meetings on Saturday and Monday that the 5-cent raise in fares effective on Saturday—was not sufficient to meet the full arbitration award.

Revenue Drops 10 Percent

Company revenues have dropped 10 percent since last fall, and are expected to fall another 10 percent because of the fare hike, Davis said. A total decline of 20 percent in the Arnold company's income will be far greater than the additional revenue anticipated from the fare raise, according to Davis.

The Arnold general counsel asserted that the line had offered the union the full 17 cents after the arbitration award—but before the strike and seizure—on condition the employes wait for the firm to win its request for a fare increase.

At the ICC it was said that the scheduled petition by the Arnold union would be unique in two ways: the employes of the bus line asking for the withdrawal of the fare boost and the charge of "fraud."

The situation, complicated as it is, is further confused by the fact that since early November the AFL union of drivers and mechanics has been technically on strike against the company. The union employes, however, continued at their posts when Virginia seized the lines to prevent the walkout. The State is still operating the Arnold transit company.

About 50,000 passengers commute daily on the Arnold lines, mostly interstate. Approximately one fourth of the passengers ride the line within the State. Fares for the latter riders are set, not by the ICC, but by the State Corporation Commission, which on Monday also upped the fare by 5 cents.

employ a director of golf operations on July 1. Meanwhile, the Interior Department was asked to proceed with an appraisal of the equipment involved, and to obtain data on operating costs.

Although the board declined to discuss publicly how much it expects to pay for the Loeffler holdings, the concessionaire already has declared that $232,000 is his valuation. He computed his advances for construction of the Fort Dupont course and clubhouse at $80,000, and recently had his equipment apprised at $152,000.

The Interior Department estimate for Dupont advances was $67,000.

Loeffler operates five public golf courses, a miniature golf course, and a driving range. He had been working without a contract for a year, but last month a new agreement was made with Interior, and approved by the Recreation Board. Green fees were hiked an average of 37 percent, and Loeffler's salar, was raised by $3000 a year under its terms.

The stumbling block on the pool arrangement was Interior's stand against segregation, and the board's view that it "cannot accept at this time the full responsibility for the operation of all swimming pools on an interracial basis."

The vote was 5 to 2, with Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, the board's only Negro member, and Irving C. Root, Interior Department representative, voting in the negative.

The board also disapproved the Hoffman bill calling for assignment of two pools for Negroes and the other two on a nonsegregated basis "as it would establish a pattern for public recreation."

It asked, instead, for enactment of the McMillan bill, which would transfer all recreation facilities, including the pools, to the board, and leave admission policies up to the board.

After the meeting, Root told reporters the Interior Department will run the swimming classes this summer.

Many Needy Facing Crisis As Relief Funds Are Slashed

lunch money, the hard wear and tear that children give their clothes.

The case of the Harris family is typical of what will happen on May 1 when the Public Welfare Department of the District of Columbia sends out its regular public assistance checks, each cut back 8 percent from this month's skimpy total.

Gerard M. Shea, public welfare director, announced the cut yesterday because the department simply hasn't the money to meet the mounting number of requests for help.

Only decision welfare authorities could make was to cut back relief grants until Congress comes through with $92,000, now contained in a deficiency appropriation request, which would tide the program over until July.

Edgar Morris, welfare board chairman, in a letter to the District Commissioners, has pointed out that since present grants are based on 1946 living costs, and since welfare recipients already this year have taken a 12 percent cut in their monthly aid checks, the new cut really adds up to a 45 percent cut from the amount of money relief cases need for basic subsistence.

Although "Harris" is not the name of the family whose case is presented here, it's typical of public assistance cases. Here are other examples of what the cuts will do:

Old age assistance cases, which started out the year with $43 per month, got cut back to $38, are, effective May 1, reduced to $34.46. Aid to dependent children (individual cases), which started out with $1.) per month, got cut back to $16.72, now to $15.22. Aid to the blind cases and single general public assistance cases, which started out the year with $45 per month grants, got cut back to $40.60, now to $37.

The Public Welfare Board has known since January that unless Congress appropriated more money, it would have to cut back relief grants. First proposal was to institute the cut on April 1. The slice was deferred to May 1 in the hope Congress might act in time to make the reduction unnecessary.

Shea explained that the lack of funds was caused entirely by the increase in numbers of persons applying for assistance. During the 1949 fiscal year this number averaged 650 per month. But during the first six months of the current fiscal year welfare officials have been getting 770 such requests per month. During the first four weeks of January, 1950, they got 802. They have been investigating each request and have found 35 percent of all suppliants are "both eligible and in need."

This has added an overload of 42 new cases a month above the estimated apportionment. In asking Congress for $92,000, however, the Welfare Board was assuming that the number of new cases added during the January-June, 1950, period would be 1652, or 216 more than the number of cases added during the preceding six months.

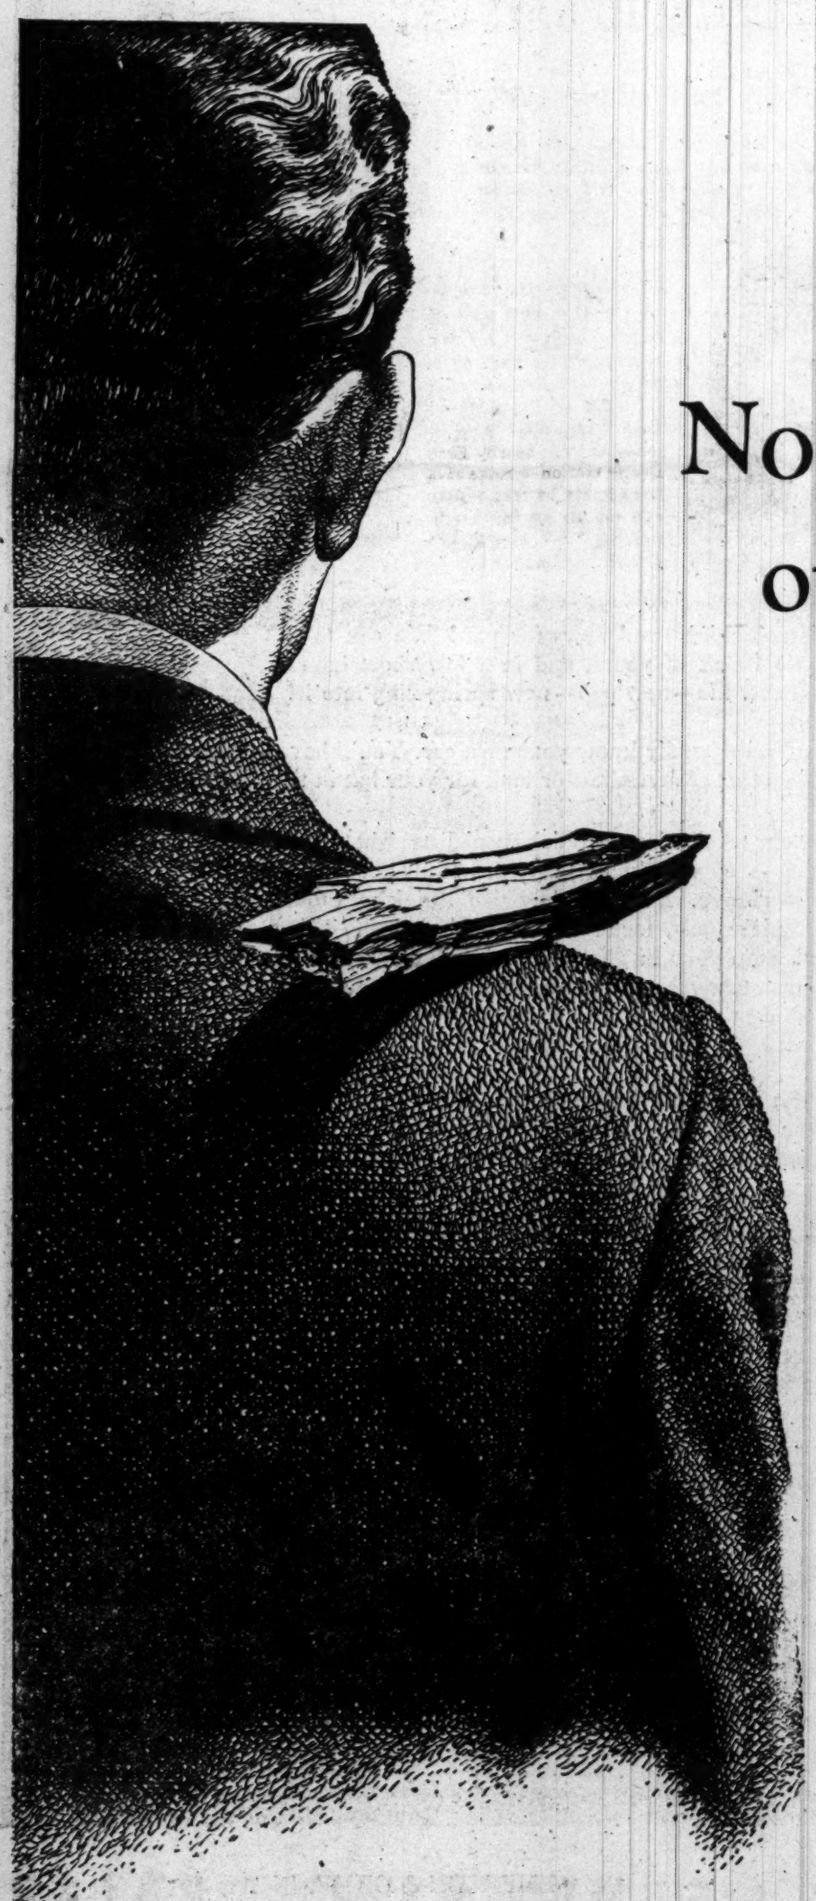

If Congress appropriates the deficiency funds early in May, as hoped, the Welfare Board will be able to restore the 8 percent cut in relief grants in June checks.

No chip on our Shoulder!

Despite our occasional "voice of protest" against certain practices in the inter-city commercial transportation field today, the Southern Railway isn't "mad" at anyone.

But we do feel that we have an obligation to you . . . and to ourselves . . . to speak out strongly against a situation which is not only strangling America's railroads . . . but threatening this country's basic, free-enterprise system of which the railroad industry is the keystone.

The self-supporting, tax-paying railroads welcome fair and honest competition. But is it fair to require them to compete for business with air, water and highway carriers who offer their services at less than cost . . . because your tax dollars . . . and ours . . . "make up the difference"? Is it good for America?

We don't think so. America's strength was built . . . not on tax-dollar handouts . . . but on fair play and self-reliance. Let's build a strong transportation system . . . in all its forms . . . the same way. The American way! The railroad way!

What Makes a GOOD EGG?

GIANT knows that the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition.

An egg's quality is related to the breeding, care, and scientific feeding of the chickens. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. There's a great difference betwen eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific egg mash (grain and bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chickens which GIANT features in its 20 stores.

Kansas City Council Asks Murder Probe

Kansas City, Mo., April 11 (U.P.)—The city council asked Democratic Gov. Forrest Smith today to investigate law enforcement here as a result of the murders of Charles Binaggio and Charles Gargotta.

"I know of nothing more I can do except call out the National Guard," the governor said at a press conference in Kansas City. "These gangland killings are hardly ever solved anywhere in the country—that's history."

Republican Murray Thompson, meanwhile, demanded that Smith fire the Kansas City Police Board. Thompson was defeated in the 1948 State elections by Smith, who got the support of Binaggio's 30,000 North End votes here.

Likewise, Mayor William E. Kemp wrote the governor asking a "most thorough investigation" of the city's police department.

"In the background of these murders," the mayor said, "is an organized band . . . whose scheme and pattern of life is to feed upon vice and rackets of every kind."

Police continued their routine inquiries among underworld characters looking for leads in the Wednesday night shootings. Binaggio, Democratic political boss of Kansas City's North Side, and Gargotta, his mobster lieutenant, were killed in Binaggio's clubroom on Truman rd.

City council adopted unanimously its resolution asking the Governor to conduct forthwith "a thorough investigation of law enforcement by the police department of Kansas City."

The resolution said gambling and other forms of crime have increased steadily here.

Governor Smith said before the council resolution reached him that law enforcement officers "are doing everything they know to solve this case." But he said he was pessimistic since it was a gangland killing.

Binaggio Killing Laid To U. S. Crime Probe

Liberty, Mo., April 11 (AP).—State Senator Emery W. Allison, indorsed by President Truman for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, said today he believed Charles Binaggio and his henchman were killed because the Government was hot on their trail as a "key to the national crime syndicate."

"I believe those killings occurred," Allison told a student convocation at William Jewell College, "because the President was bringing every weapon of Federal law at his command on Binaggio . . . and they could not deliver wide open gambling and lawlessness that they had promised their associates of the national crime syndicates."

Representative Short (R., Mo.) told the House in Washington Thursday that he had been reliably informed Binaggio was in the way in the Missouri senatorial campaign. "So what happened?" Short asked. "He is bumped off . . . Even thieves fall out."

At Brooklyn

O'Dwyer Aid Rejected in Payoff Probe

New York, April 11 (AP).—Special Brooklyn investigators, politely asking the mayor to keep hands off for the time being, today dug into possible payoffs to some policemen by gamblers.

Mayor William O'Dwyer, just back from a Florida vacation, suggested yesterday that City Investigation Commissioner James H. Sheils lend a hand in the probe.

But Kings County District Attorney Miles F. McDonald, who has been pressing a special gambling probe for a month, turned aside the offer.

He said that sending in the new investigators might hamper efforts by his own picked squad, which Saturday night turned up the evidence indicating payoffs to police. McDonald planned to begin laying the new evidence before a special grand jury Wednesday.

Although he objected to a supplemental probe by the investigation commissioner, he gave his approval to a special inquiry by police department officials, already under way. And he promised to give O'Dwyer a full report by the end of the week, the mayor told newsmen.

The inquiry centered in the Navy Yard section of Brooklyn, where three men were arrested in a raid, and held under $25,000 bail each as material witnesses.

Th raiders found papers bearing notations saying "the law" had been "iced"—which in underworld language means bribed.

Authorities said the three also had records of license numbers of some 50 cars used by special investigators, but that these plates have since been changed.

Alexandrian Acquitted of Rape Charge

Leslie T. Freeman, Alexandria warehouseman, was cleared in Alexandria Corporation Court yesterday of raping a 34-year-old widow last October 13.

He was acquitted by Judge William P. Woolls, who took the case under advisement last Wednesday after an all-day hearing behind closed doors.

Freeman, 49, was described by his attorney, Walter I. Young, as "a highly respected member of Alexandria's Negro community." He was accused of raping Mrs. Opal Marie Burton when she went to the warehouse where Freeman was employed to reclaim some papers belonging to her late husband.

The defendant denied the charge during the trial. He insisted he merely helped Mrs. Burton from the warehouse to her home at a nearby hotel because, he contended, she had been drinking.

Woolls said that in the face of conflicting claims, he had found insufficient evidence to warrant a conviction. He also noted he found "some discrepancies" in the testimony of the complainant.

The complainant in the case, who lived at the Belvoir Hotel in Alexandria at the time of the incident, has since moved to North Carolina.

Senate Unit for Crime Inquiry Decided On

Senate floor, probably later this week.

Lucas told reporters Vice President Barkley would name the five members, three Democrats and two Republicans. Senators Wiley (Wis.) and Langer (N. Dak.) outrank Ferguson and Donnell on the Judiciary group while Senator Tobey (N. H.) is the ranking Republican on Interstate Commerce.

The majority leader said the party policy group agreed to ask for $150,000 for the committee in order to obtain the "most capable and competent staff" possible. He said the group hoped the committee would employ as chief counsel an outstanding lawyer such as William D. Mitchell, Owen J. Roberts or Burton K. Wheeler.

Lucas said the time limit for the committee would be set in the new resolution which Kefauver began at once to draft. Kefauver said it might be January 1, 1951. Lucas said an extension would always be possible.

The majority leader said that the special committee would, in effect, serve as a subcommittee for both Judiciary and Commerce with power to send legislation to either group.

McFarland to Go Ahead

But Senator McFarland (D., Ariz.), chairman of a Commerce Subcommittee set up to consider one of two anticrime bills recently proposed by the Justice Department, said his group would go right ahead. It is due to hear Attorney General McGrath next Monday. Lucas had said the McFarlend group would, in effect, be merged with the special committee. Just what will happen was uncertain last night.

Kefauver said he thought it would be very useful for McFarland to go ahead with hearings on the bill to ban use of interstate communications facilities for race betting information as long as the witnesses are close at hand. McFarland has announced he will hear a number of big city mayors as well as Federal officials but he shied off yesterday when asked if he would call such gambling world figures as Frank Costello.

If the special committee is approved by the Senate in the form outlined by Lucas, Costello and other big names in the rackets world are alamost certain to be called to testify on how they operate. Kefauver already has a "voluminous file" on interstate racketeering and crime.

Wherry asked reporters yesterday why the Democrats had junked the plan to have Judiciary run the probe and whether this was done "to investigate or to cover up." But he wouldn't say yes when one reporter repeatedly asked him if he considered the special committee a "whitewash."

Donnell Up for Reelection

Donnell is up for reelection in Missouri this year and Democrats appeared to fear that if he were on the investigating committee he might be able to help his chances. Ferguson, the chief GOP Senate investigator in the past, likewise might make trouble for the Democrats who depend to a large extent on big city political machines. And the tygoons generally operate in big cities where, the stories go, they have many a political tie-in.

Kefauver said he wanted to "get the job done as soon as possible" but he doubted that out of it would come any proposed legislation in time for enactment by this session of Congress. The two bills already before the Commerce group, however, could conceivably pass this year. The second bill would ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

The action by the policy group yesterday came after months of agitation by various crime commissions and civic groups for an all-out investigation. This drive resulted in a crime conference called by McGrath in February. The conference called for passage of the two bills already submitted and action on several other fronts, all of which now probably will be explored.

The special joint-subcommittee, something new in the Senate, was Lucas' own idea. He said he discussed the proposed investigation in a general way with President Truman at their White House conference yesterday. Lucas and Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle were busy the past two days lining up Democratic senators for the plan.

GWU Ceremony Pays Tribute to Dr. H. D. Fry

The tablet symbolizes the Fry professorship of physiology at GWU, provided in his honor in the will of his wife, Annabelle Lee Fry. Attending yesterday's services were his daughters, Mrs. Andrew B. Duvall and Mrs. William E. Pearson.

Witnesses Discuss Jobless Payments

To Judgeship

Emory Smith Appointment Reported Set

Emory B. Smith, Washington lawyer, will be nominated by President Truman to be a judge of Municipal Court, despite official denials that a decision has been made, it was learned yesterday.

Smith

The nomination, which is subject to Senate confirmation, will be delayed for some time, however. When Smith is appointed, the 13-judge bench of the court will be complete.

Strictly unofficial indications around Judiciary Square that Smith will fill the vacancy came from numerous candidates for the job who said they had given up their campaigns for appointment.

Smith, a practicing lawyer, has been publicity director of Howard University, and a professor at the Robert H. Terrell Law School. He has his office at 1707 2d st. nw.

He is understood to have the strong support of Representative William L. Dawson, (D., Ill.) an influential official of the Democratic Party.

The Neely bill to liberalize unemployment payments to District workers yesterday ran into a crossfire of unqualified labor support and demands by local businessmen for a farthr "60-day study."

Congressional airing on the measure began at a packed hearing before the Senate District Committee. The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

Business and labor leaders turned out in force to listen to the conflicting testimony, partly because the projected District legislation is in line with that proposed for the country last week by President Truman.

For local workers, the Neely measure would boost the present unemployment benefits scale from a $6 minimum and $20 maximum to an $8 minimum and $33 maximum. It also would permit idle workers to draw payments for a maximum of 26 weeks instead of the 20 weeks.

Preller Argues for Bill

C. F. Preller, president of the Washington Central Labor Union, said the legislation was needed to put District payments on a par with those of several other States, and to help "maintain the high volume of consumer purchasing power so necessary for a strong economy."

Director C. A. Wharton of the District Unemployment Compensation Board testified that 17 of the 51 jurisdictions with similar programs pay at the District's $20 maximum weekly rates, while 32 others pay more. Two pay less than the District, he said.

He backed away from repeated requests by Gerhard P. van Arkel, committee counsel, to commit himself on the pending bill on grounds the board has not yet approved it.

More Study Asked

For the Commissioners, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West reported more time was needed to reach a conclusion on the bill. It was introduced March 17 by Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.).

The rest of the morning hearing was devoted to testimony by representatives of business organizations, with the Washington Board of Trade setting the pace.

A. Julian Brylawski testified the Board of Trade was not now opposing the measure, but asked the committee for "at least 60 more days" to study its "far-reaching implications." This would postpone action into the closing month of Congress as adjournment plans stand now.

But "preliminary examination" indicates, he said, that the proposed liberalization would make it possible for workers to "get more for not working than for working."

Other Opponents Heard

Maurice G. Long, of the Washington Laundry & Dry Cleaning Association, said many "abuses" and "waste of public funds" under the existing law are not corrected by the proposed measure.

8 D. C. Bills Slated for Floor Action

Bills to authorize another large civilian airport in the Washington area and to put the District on fast time this summer are among eight local measures slated for Senate floor action Friday.

Other bills of local interest due to come up under the Senate's unanimous consent procedure with the Friday calendar call, would:

Establish a commission on human rights here; increase from $50 to $300 the amount local credit unions may loan without security; increase the number of Washington West Point cadets from 6 to 12, and midshipmen from 5 to 15; give legal basis to one day off a week for Park Police which they now receive by administrative order; liberalize District regulations relating to group and industrial insurance; allow Federal and District employes regular pay if sickness occurs when on official travel orders.

HIGH-TEST PERFORMANCE AT REGULAR GAS PRICE!

Traffic Rolls Eastward at Dupont Circle

Dupont Circle was opened to eastbound traffic yesterday afternoon, and the last piece of surface roadway in the underpass project is scheduled to open at 7:30 a. m. today.

Only stretch not ready last night was a lane of Connecticut ave. leading south off the circle. J. N. Robertson, District Highway Director, said it was blacktopped yesterday, but was kept closed overnight to harden.

The Commissioners yesterday approved new parking regulations which will become effective in about 10 days on streets near the circle. They:

(1) Prohibit parking on either side of Connecticut ave. between N st. and Florida ave. during rush hours.

(2) Prohibit parking on either side of P st. between 18th and 20th sts. at any time, and on R st. between Florida and Connecticut aves. during rush hours.

(3) Change slightly the hours during which parking is permitted on Hillyer pl. and S st.

In addition the Commissioners agreed to make 20th st. one-way southbound between Connecticut and Massachusetts aves. Except during rush hours two-hour parking will be permitted on the west side of 20th st. No parking is permitted there now.

Business Fete Planned

Plans for a business celebration to tie in with District ceremonies at the official opening of the Dupont Circle underpass were disclosed last night.

Leo G. Hessler, cochairman of the fastival committee, told 75 members and guests of the Connecticut Avenue Association that a definite date has not been confirmed, but it was hoped the celebration could be held April 25.

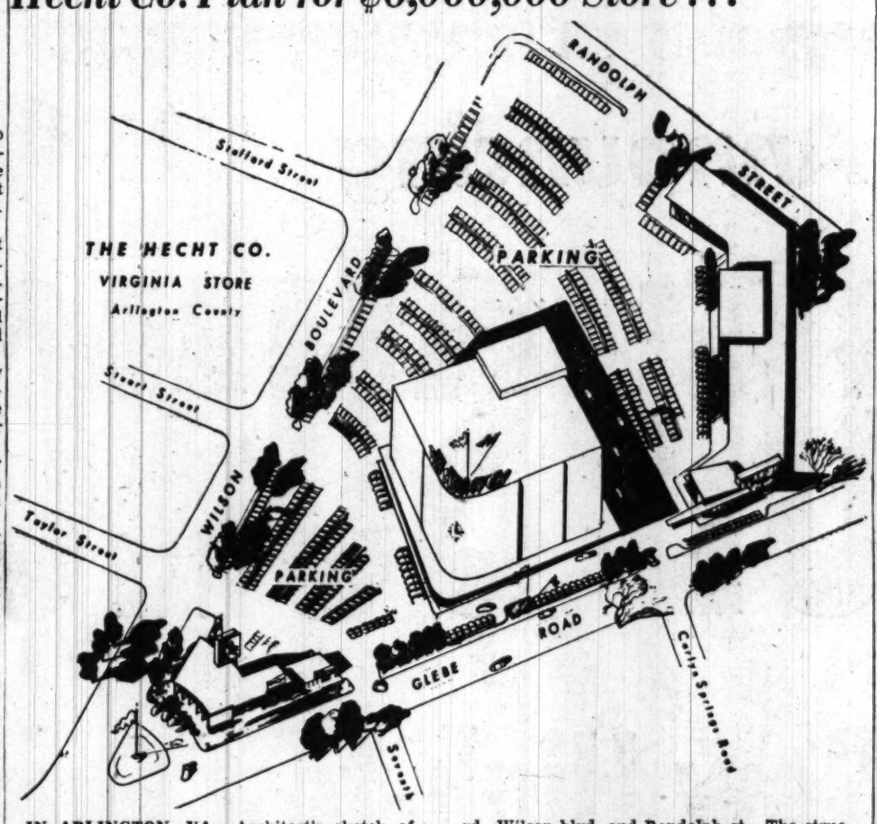

The dinner meeting at the Mayflower was a combined membership and Easter Parade celebration event, President Horace J. Meyers said. He announced that 15 new members had joined the association.

Alfred Pasternak, chairman of the Easter Parade Committee, called the event "a tremendous success."

Easter window award cups were presented to the shops of Joan Roberts, 1100 Connecticut ave., and Selma's Gowns, 1307 Connecticut ave. nw.

Hecht Co. Plan for $6,000,000 Store . . .

IN ARLINGTON, VA.—Architect's sketch of the six-million-dollar department store which the Hecht Company has announced will be built by the fall of 1951 in Arlington at North Glebe rd., Wilson blvd. and Randolph st. The structure will contain "approximately" 250,000 square feet. Parking lots for 2000 cars will be maintained adjacent to the store mission. There was no expressed opposition.

The petition itself was to change from a local-commercial to a general-commercial classification four blocks of land—in the 4200 and 4300 blocks of Wilson blvd., and in the 600 and 700 blocks of Glebe rd.

The petitioners were the current owners of the property, John E. DeLashmutt, Bessie C. Howell, and Joseph and Maude Fuschini.

They were represented, however, by Lawrence Douglas, Arlington attorney for the Hecht Co.

Options have been filed in Arlington Circuit Court for these properties, together with options for the remainder of the land.

Attorney Douglas said it was generally known that his company has options on the land.

Asking for the rezoning, he said it would permit Hecht's to build "the sort of mercantile operation for which we (Hecht's) have become known in Silver Spring." The store, he continued, "would be a credit and an asset," and "a convenience of paramount importance to the county."

Involved in the zoning action is the right to construct to a height of 60 feet, whereas the previous classification would have permitted construction up to 35 feet only.

Although Hecht Co. officials said actual specifications for the building are still on the drawing board, a schematic diagram of the site shows a building similar to that constructed by Hecht's in Silver Spring.

But the company said that while the general layout would follow the lines of the Silver Spring venture, the new operation will include "many innovations, customer conveniences, and services gained from more than a year's study and inspection of other stores from coast to coast."

One expectation is that the Arlington store will be air conditioned and windowless, like the Siver Spring one.

Dulcan's announcement said that the success of the Silver Spring unit "substantiated the need for such a community store in Virginia to serve both Arlington and Fairfax Counties, the city of Alexandria anad surrounding counties."

He emphasized that the Arlington operation "will be no 'branch store' in the accepted sense of the word, but a thoroughly complete retail institution giving the consumers typical Hecht Co. merchandise and services.

"Department store operation today," Dulcan added, "is undergoing significant trends. Shopping convenience must keep pace with population shifts in the era of the motor car and new types of living habits.

"Merchants not only in Washington, but throughout the country, are developing their plans accordingly—in line with these trends."

The new store is to be known as "The Hecht Co., Virginia." The company said it plans to begin construction "as soon as possible with a 1951 opening in mind."

The announcement by Dulcan and Samuel M. Hecht, president of The Hecht Co., said the Arlington plan is part of a program of long standing that "contemplates simultaneous expansion of the Washington Hecht Co. store as the 'mother store,' with a number of 'perimeter' department stores located in Greater Washington."

Philadelphia Orchestra Plays Ward's Second Symphony Here

By Paul Hume

Robert Ward's second symphony was a feature of last night's Philadelphia Orchestra concert.

Under the direction of Eugene Ormandy, the symphony had its second Washington hearing. Its world premiere occurred in Constitution Hall in January of 1948 when Hans Kindler and the National Symphony played the score.

By a strange coincidence, it was reviewed at that time in these columns by Donald Engle. Mr. Engle is now writing excellent program notes for the Philadelphia Orchestra and provided the notes for the Ward symphony last night.

Two years ago, in speaking of the Ward piece, Engle described its "loosely knit dance rhythms in the last movement," the "vigorous fugal treatment of the first movement," and the "largely introspective slow movement."

These phrases still serve accurately to describe the music. It occurred to us, while listening, that Ward has written music which would admirably serve as background for a fine movie such as the "Heiress" for which Aaron Copland wrote the brilliant score.

If Hollywood would find some reasonable way of utilizing our more gifted composers without restricting their talents, men such as Ward would find new and important fields to investigate. Ormandy delivered the symphony with remarkable power and clarity.

He closed the evening with his familiar, tonally resplendent account of "Daphnis and Chloe" by Ravel. He sees this in a deliberate light, appropriately highlighted by all the sensuous tone of his players.

The concert opened with what has become an annual affair: The Franck D Minor Symphony, preceded by Ormandy's skilled transcription of a Handel Overture. Next year we would suggest the D'Indy B Flat Symphony, or one by Milhaud, Honegger, or Roussel to replace the Franck.

Chilean President

There are many reasons why it is a pleasure to welcome to Washington His Excellency, Gabriel Gonzalez Videla, President of Chile. His country is one of the most consistent friends of the United States, an important customer as well as supplier, a land in which American investment is heavy. President Gonzalez is a "small d" democrat who has proved himself an astute statesman in maintaining representative institutions in a time of stress. Chile is one of those rarities in Latin America where the army does not dominate politics, and the Gonzalez government has been an active force for stability in the hemisphere.

A lawyer and newspaperman who had a rapid rise to political prominence, President Gonzalez is perhaps best known for his militant anticommunism in a country where Communist strength assumed formidable proportions. Despite the outlawing of the Communist Party, Chile respects freedom of the press and boasts of her record in social legislation. One source of the President's popularity is the fact that he goes out frequently to talk directly to the workers.

Although the Chilean economy is becoming more diversified, it still is largely dependent on the sales of two minerals—copper and nitrate. Chile suffered when the price of copper fell, though recently conditions have improved. Yet President Gonzalez does not seek formal financial aid. Chile is benefiting from Marshall Plan purchases and already has received extensive Export-Import and World Bank loans. Indeed, in developing her newly discovered oil reserves herself, she is setting an impressive example of self-help which the United States ought to be encouraging.

Undoubtedly President Gonzalez does have an interest, however, in legislation extending the tariff exemption on Chilean copper for two more years. This offers an opportunity for American representatives to talk in turn about an investment treaty similar to that signed with Uruguay. There need be no implication that investments are treated unfairly now; but the formalization of an agreement on terms acceptable to both countries would cement the understanding.

President Gonzalez is the fourth Latin-American chief executive to visit Washington since the war. We think these visits are a good custom which pays off not only in acquainting good neighbors with the United States but also in enlivened American interest in the countries south of the Rio Grande. We urge Washingtonians to join today in a hearty "Bienvenido, Presidente Gonzalez Videla!"

Lattimore's "Clearance"

The conflict that has developed between Senator Tydings and Senator Lodge casts doubt on the validity of the public "clearance" given to Dr. Owen Lattimore by the former in the name of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee. At the end of Dr. Lattimore's long appearance before the subcommittee last Thursday, Senator Tydings made this unequivocal statement:

> As chairman, I think I owe it to you and to the country to tell you that four members of this subcommittee recently had a complete summary of your loyalty file read to us in the presence of Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. At the conclusion of the reading, it was the unanimous opinion of all members of the subcommittee and of all others in the room that there is nothing in the files to show you have ever been a Communist or ever have been connected with espionage. So that the FBI file puts you completely, up to this moment, at least, in the clear.

Senator Lodge has now, however, dissociated himself from this statement. "I have reached no final conclusions whatever on any phase of this investigation," he said on Monday. "I certainly will not reach any until I have questioned a number of witnesses in executive session. When I do reach conclusions, I shall announce them myself. No one is authorized to speak for me." This can scarcely be construed as anything but a deliberate slap at the subcommittee chairman. And the inference is inescapable either that Senator Tydings spoke for his colleagues without being fully authorized to do so or that Senator Lodge has had a change of mind.

This much must be said in Senator Tydings' behalf: Some days after the subcommittee's visit to the office of Attorney General McGrath, Senator Lodge said on the floor of the Senate, "All we can learn so far shows clearly that none of the current charges have been proven, and that everything that we know about J. Edgar Hoover and others specifically charged with insuring loyalty is such as to inspire confidence." This would suggest pretty plainly that he had seen nothing he considered damaging to Dr. Lattimore in the analysis made available to the subcommittee by Mr. Hoover.

Senator Lodge is entitled, however, to speak for himself. At the time Dr. Lattimore testified, Senator Lodge said plainly that he wished to ask the witness some questions later on in executive session; and he had left the hearing room by the time Senator Tydings made his statement concerning the summary of the Lattimore loyalty file. Senator Lodge is quite justified in wanting to wait until all the evidence in the case has been presented before participating in a subcommittee "clearance" of Dr. Lattimore. But once Senator McCarthy has had a chance to present his "mystery" witness, we hope that Senator Lodge will join his Democratic colleagues in according Dr. Lattimore as full a vindication as he seems to deserve. As a matter of simple justice, this vindication should come with the least possible delay.

Promise vs. Performance

The Senate showed good judgment in staying on the job while the House is taking its Easter recess. Yesterday the Democratic Policy Committee also showed good judgment in deciding to place the House-passed ECA authorization bill ahead of the fair employment practices bill. This was a difficult decision to make because of the many disappointments that the sponsors of the FEPC measure have already suffered. But it would certainly have been a mistake to have let the anticipated filibuster against the FEPC measure get in the way of the ECA.

The fact is that Congress has been making haste slowly. While it has sent 31 bills to the President since the session began in January, most of them are trivial. Only four of these bills are of special significance: the repeal of all Federal taxes on oleomargarine; aid to Korea; revision of farm acreage allotments to cotton and peanut farmers; and the natural gas bill. A liberalized displaced persons bill has passed both houses, however, and the housing bill, trimmed of its Administration-sponsored cooperative housing provisions, has gone to the White House. With the omnibus appropriation bill yet to pass the House, this is a poor showing for the halfway mark of the session.

It has long since been evident that many of the Administration's foremost legislative projects will get no attention this year. Last January the President asked Congress to close the loopholes in the antitrust laws, to pass a new tax measure and the sweeping Brannan farm-aid plan, to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, give the country a medical insurance system, expand the social security program, pass the Federal aid-to-education bill, approve the St. Lawrence seaway and the Columbia Valley Authority in addition to continuing Selective Service and the ECA and approving the Point Four program. It was an impossible load to dump on any Congress, and it is doubtful whether the President, who used to be a legislator himself, expected Congress to act on even a major part of these recommendations. Congress should not be belabored for failing to accomplish the impossible.

There is evidence of poor management in the fact that, with all this Administration program awaiting action, Congress came up with the natural gas bill. But in general the vast gulf between promise and accomplishment is traceable to the failure of the President to sit down with legislative leaders and work out a balanced and feasible legislative program. So long as he merely pushes toward Congress a vast and undigested program of controversial measures, the performance of the legislative arm is likely to appear very puny indeed. It is time to recognize that the period in which Congress would rubber-stamp bills as they came from the White House has passed. We should have less confusion and fewer disappointed hopes if the Administration's legislative program were adjusted to the reasonable capacity of Congress to convert rough ideas into workable laws in keeping with our Federal system and within our fiscal resources.

Import Promotion

Mr. Wayne C. Taylor, who recently headed an ECA-Commerce Department mission to investigate the possibilities for increased sales of European products in the United States and other dollar markets, is admirably qualified for his assignment as chief of a new ECA trade promotion division to assist aided countries to earn more dollars. Mr. Taylor is well aware that many obstacles stand in the way of such trade expansion that cannot be overcome by aggressive selling campaigns alone. As was pointed out in the ECA mission report, restrictive European trade policies limit sales of goods to the United States. And our own complicated, inequitable customs procedures, together with high, sometimes prohibitory, tariffs on many European manufactured goods for which there is a large potential American demand, also cut down imports.

However, if the ECA succeeds in convincing the American people that it is to their own interest to buy more European goods, it can count on public support of its campaign to reform customs procedures and lower tariff barriers in accordance with the procedures laid down by the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. Moreover, a great deal can be done with the advice and active encouragement of ECA officials like Mr. Taylor to spur European exporters to make more determined marketing procedures, through contacts with American buyers, study of our marketing methods, etc.

In a letter to Senator Smith of New Jersey, ECA Administrator Hoffman points out that our own prosperity and security as well as that of western European countries will be seriously endangered unless a way is found to close the dollar gap between now and 1953 without drastically cutting down our exports to Europe. Mr. Hoffman concludes that a large part of the increased dollar earnings needed to enable Europe to buy indispensable goods and services from us could be obtained through the tourist trade and from sales of noncompetitive goods, leaving approximately 400 million dollars to be earned by sales of European goods that compete with American products. That is just a third of 1 percent of the total wholesale value of the goods produced in the United States last year!

To be sure, even this limited increase in United States imports would harm some domestic businesses, but Mr. Hoffman is probably right in assuming that business failures brought about by the increase in imports would be "utterly insignificant." In any case, imports will have to be stepped up to prevent a decline in exports that would impose hardships on our exporting industries. We must face the fact that when dollar gifts are no longer available, the countries of western Europe will have to limit their dollar buying to the amount of their dollar earnings. By helping them to bring their trade with us into balance at a reasonably high level, we shall be laying the basis for sound world trade recovery, and at the same time protecting our own economy from the dislocation that would result from a sudden and drastic decline in our export trade.

Secret Research

It is a significant commentary on the trend of the times that Syracuse University's Institute of Industrial Research has announced it will shy away in future from secret projects offered it by the Atomic Energy Commission. "In general," said the institute's director, "we don't like to take secret contracts because they are contrary to the purpose of university research programs to make scientific knowledge generally available."

The attitude is an entirely understandable one in the light of all the restrictions entailed in secret research—loyalty clearance, exposure to political attack, restraints on communication with colleagues. And it is altogether desirable that some institutions remain independent of the Government and free to devote their personnel and facilities to research which has no immediate relation to military security. There would be an obvious danger, however, in a general flight on the part of universities from Government research contracts. And this danger is one which it is imperative for legislators to take into account when they attempt, in the name of security, to put fetters on scientific intellects.

In the current Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, Prof. Frederick Seitz of the University of Illinois has set forth explicitly the factors that make scientists reluctant to enter upon Government research projects. One of these factors, he says, is "concern about the methods employed to maintain what is normally termed 'secrecy.' Many scientists feel that the techniques now widely employed to classify scientific information do far more harm than good because they interrupt the free flow of information that should be widely disseminated and provide a completely false sense of security. In addition, there is the fear that security organizations have, on the whole, too little concern for the rights of the individual and will undertake character assassination on grounds which bear little relationship to actual guilt."

This anxiety on the part of scientists can be overcome only by striking a rational balance between what the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy aptly called "security by concealment" and "security by achievement." Professor Seitz has offered a useful suggestion on this score—that an agency patterned on the lines of the wartime Office of Scientific Research and Development be created which would, in the manner of its very successful model, encourage decentralized authority and internal freedom. Obviously, scientists would have to be accorded a major voice in the shaping of its policies.

The burden of military research, Professor Seitz believes, should be distributed fairly broadly by a leave-of-absence system which would give leading academic and industrial scientists an uninterrupted two or three year term of service in military laboratories. He thinks this would be far preferable to an extension of the consulting system or visiting-committee system now in vogue. The aim is at once to provide adequate personnel for secret military work and adequate personnel for the fundamental academic task of expanding the general boundaries of scientific knowledge.

APOLOGY FOR GROWING UP

Mountain, mountain, I knock at your door—
To the world inside the mountain;
Fountain, fountain, I search your rock floor
For the ring that unlatches
Skylights of dwellings of crystal whose thatch is Your rainbow lyre.

Fire, fire, is there room in an ember
To warm our November?
To smiling surfaces I cool
Because, I know that there is more
Than moonlight to the pool.
Let none confuse
This with indifference. I choose
The core.

I must enter the heart of things.
Wings are required; but I need more than wings.
I have been outside too long,
On a star I wasted my youth and my song.
Fire, air, water, earth

Communist Asia

Mr. Vicente Villamin, in his communication of April 8, presents an interesting and challenging concept of the conflict in Asia, and the American relationship to that conflict.

Certainly, America does not "possess" Asia either physically or ideologically, any more than Asia possesses America either physically or ideologically. In the past, however, between America and Asia, there has existed "a state of relations" which has approximated, at least, a mutually beneficial partnership. If, now, as seems inevitable, Russian communism becomes possessed of Asia both physically and ideologically, will this mutually benevolent relation ship between Asia and America be permitted to continue? To answer this question affirmatively, it would be necessary to ignore completely all the lessons of the past which have so clearly delineated the aims and the patterns of action of Russian communism. In this sense, it is appropriate to say that America is losing Asia.

In Asia, the first casualty of "the Battle of Asia" will be the Old Order, of course. The conflict, however, did not begin in Asia, nor will it end in Asia; the struggle is world-wide in scope. Asia represents one "theater of operations" in this world-wide struggle; the Battle of Asia one battle in a series of battles, past, present and future, which have been, are being, and will be fought throughout the world.

It is possible, of course, that Russian communism might win the battle of Asia and, as a direct result of that victory, lose the war—". . . for when the peoples of Asia find out that they have lost America, lost their age-old liberties, and have acquired Russia, its poverty, its severity and regimentation, they will rally to the Old Order and, with their leaders, the wiser for their experience, they will expunge communism from their life and tell Russia to quit Asia for good and all." For my part, however, I should not like to pin all my hopes of ultimate victory upon that particular course of events. . . . I remember Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, etc., and what has happened to the leaders in those countries.

Chinese Purchase Fees

During the past few days there were various reports in the press in connection with the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Subcommittee hearings regarding the cause of delay of gasoline shipments to China in 1948. Most reports attributed the cause of delay to the allegation that the Central Trust of China wanted to charge 1 percent fee on these shipments. In order to clear up the misunderstanding, I am authorized to point out the facts as follows:

1. The Central Trust of China is a Chinese government purchasing agency and duly authorized by the Chinese government to charge a handling fee of 1 percent on all purchases requested of it by other government departments. This charge is understood to be in line with the general practice of the purchasing agencies of foreign governments, including the United States.

2. The misunderstanding referred to in the particular case was duly explained originally to the State Department in July to its satisfaction. Moreover, Chinese applications to the State Department for payment out of $125,000,000 special grant of 1948, including the application dated July 22, 1948, for aviation gasoline, did not, in fact, include any such charge. The issuance of the necessary license for these shipments was completed in late September 1948.

High School Cadets

The Washington High School Cadet Corps was organized in 1882 when two companies of 50 men each were formed at Central High School. Its purpose then was only to coordinate military movements, i.e., to drill.

The enrollment this year is at a new low. Some reasons for this are: (1) time of drill, (2) after-school employment, (3) the attitude of the parent toward military training, (4) the cost of the uniform. The training program this year, as the Army expects it, is similar to the junior ROTC program. The program calls for (1) physical development, (2) military science and tactics, (3) military teaching methods, (4) first aid, (5) map reading, (6) military organization, and last of all close-order drill.

This work should at least take eight hours a week, yet most schools can only give three.

The Army does not care who wins the cadet company competition; all it cares is that we are well rounded in military knowledge. If this is all it wants let it send in Regular Army instructors; also, change the time of drill, the amount of drill, and the price of the uniform. If this cannot be done, we should discontinue the cadets as part of our educational program.

Wasting Police

In view of the recent crime wave here in Washington, would it not be better if the Police Department directed more attention to that phase of duty?

I am aware of the fact, that some attention should be given to traffic, but as it stands, I think too much time is spent, by some members of the force, hiding behind signs and in intersections awaiting something that would hardly amount to the hideous crimes that have been committed right under their noses. Moreover, I think, that a few of the members should be told that they are not getting paid to act as gestapos, but rather as law-abiding citizens themselves, which would induce respect from all.

"Soldiers' Home"

I see that The Washington Post states (editorial, April 7) that no special land was set aside for the Soldiers' Home. As a matter of fact the present site was designated for that purpose. The upkeep and expenses are paid by soldiers, either by direct monthly contribution or by fines, etc. So by what right do any pompous dunderheads try to take any or all of the home away? BUD BRADLEY.
Washington.

Editor's note: We did not say that no special land was set aside for the Soliders' Home. What we said was that title to the land was vested "not in any individuals, but in the United States," and that the Government has a commitment to maintain a home for retired enlisted men "but not to devote to that purpose any particular land." The 10 cents a month paid by each soldier in the Regular Army covers only about 40 percent of operating expenses; retired soldiers, of course, have no special claim to the court-martial fines which defray the balance of the expenses.

Inflation In Korea

Every nation should have a balanced budget, and should take measures to reduce inflation. He who holds the purse-strings has a right to use this advantage to help toward attaining these desired ends. For this reason, Secretary of State Acheson's recent fatherly advice and warning to the Korean government on the above mentioned two points, is both timely and justifiable. However, before we and the Secretary of State become smug and self-righteous in our relations with this friendly nation, we should seriously ponder the following pertinent facts.

Korea was exploited and drained for forty years by Japan. Immediately prior to surrender, Japan flooded Korea with billions of won, which was and still is the official currency unit of the nation. For the three years of the American Military Government we ran printing presses day and night turning out crisp, green hundred "won" notes, with which we paid the expenses of the Military Government and part of the American occupation.

During the period of the Military Government we let contracts at astronomical figures to Korean contractors for airfields, bridges, roads, barracks, military installations, housing for American civilian employes, railroad and wharf facilities, etc. All these things were necessary, but they were done in such a way as to greatly increase inflation.

The turning over of the industrially rich and well developed northern half of the country to Communist domination, was the one thing more than any other, which is responsible for the deplorable economic condition of the Korean Republic (South) today.

When North Korea, at the instigation of Soviet Russia, cut South Korea off from the powerful hydroelectric plants in the north (immediately after the United Nations supervised elections in 1948), South Korean industry and general economy suffered a shock from which it will take years to recover. When the South Korean Republic began to function as an independent nation in August, 1948, only a year and a half ago, she had to begin practically from scratch to develop her industry, mining, commerce and financial system.

Due to the pressure of communism from the North and from a well organized, financed and disciplined fifth column from within, the Korean government has had to maintain a large and expensively equipped police and military force. This will have to be continued till Communist aggression is brought under control throughout the Far East.

Our own State Department has continued to send out and maintain specialists and administrators in ECA and other work in Korea who know practically nothing of Korean life, customs and conditions. This fact has added confusion to the situation of which the Secretary of State complains, and has caused many Koreans to doubt America's sincerity.

Free People On Exhibit

By Malvina Lindsay

Capital Sightseers.

THE HIGH school sophomore with the round, little-boy face and big blue spectacled eyes couldn't squeeze in with his fellow tourists at the restaurant table so he sat with me. Immediately he began talking.

He had seen "everything," even heard a Senator make a speech. "I bet somebody wrote it for him," he said. He and his companions from a Chicago high school were doing things in a de luxe way. His dad had told him not to pinch pennies as he might never get to Washington again, and it was important to know all about the place where the country was run.

"But I might come back," he said, "that is, if I become a politician." That was one of the destinies he was considering, along with law, salesmanship and being a national park guide (mounted, of course).

His companions bore down on him noisily when he had finished his second order of fried chicken. "What do you think of Chicago boys?" one asked me. Before I could reply, my table mate was enjoining me, "Remember if you ever hear 'Blake for President' that'll be me!"

SO AMERICAN boys still talked that way! And with what easy self-confidence, geniality, unrestraint, this group was taking in the town. How typical of youthful spring tourists, in fact, of most of the older ones!

This was Washington's big annual chance to see the rest of the country, I reflected. And it was a time to be proud of what one saw.

Yet—would that pride continue? Or would the poisonous emotional gases of the cold war, now making the Capital a cauldron of suspicion and bitterness, now setting in action ugly divisive forces throughout the Nation, in time change the American character? Would we some day have tourists who walked timorously and impassively through Capitol and White House, among the cherry blossoms, with stealthy glances at lines of armed guards? Would visitors be tight lipped, secretive in restaurants, among each other?

Well, at least no one was acting that way yet. How heartening it was to encounter the open friendliness of most visitors, their eagerness to talk about their sightseeing, themselves, even to voice their opinions. What more touching than their pride in their home towns, their sense of ownership in their national Capital? What more impressive than their quiet assurance in walking into all places open to them, their posing for the camera before magnificent edifices and noble statutes?

A LONG heritage of democratic government and personal liberty had given them these attitudes—"a long education in self-government and tolerance"—as Henry Steele Commager, author of The American Mind, points out. But Commager also warns that though Americans are by nature antiauthoritarian and "once fierce nonconformists," they are coming increasingly to demand conformity of each other in speech, dress, manners, food, furnishings, even things of the mind, as evidenced by "interest in loyalty oaths, patriotic cliches, agreement in political, even economic fundamentals."

Yet the right to difference of opinion without name calling and accusation had been one of the foundation stones on which human liberty had rested both in this country and in others. The spirit of "I disapprove of what you say but I will defend to the death your right to say it" had always had strong appeal in this country.

Yet now here was this sinister thread of authoritarianism running through the country. Here were ugly emotions rampant, expressing themselves in angry, vehement, even profane — and often anonymous — letters to Congress. Would this create such dark suspicion and fear that Americans eventually would lose their traditional concern with justice, their feeling for fair play, their inventiveness in ideas as well as gadgets, even their great generosity, which was founded in part on never having to be secretive, withdrawn, afraid?

Yet the vein of personal independence was deep and strong. And the practice of free thought and free expression of it a long one. Surely the American people, symbolized by these assured, expansive tourists, would in the long run assert their common sense and courage and continue to be themselves.

Rights Of Whites

Racial conditions are disgraceful here, says Federal Judge J. Waties Waring.

That statement is the outgrowth of a misguided mind. This man and his wife are starting on a campaign similar to the Roosevelts. They are trying to force on the Anglo-Saxons something they don't want. Are the Anglo-Saxons forcing themselves on the Negroes, Orientals or Latins? No! This "humane rights" lingo only applies to the yellow, black and Latin races.

Segregation is the spinal cord of every republican form of government, and the white primary is the basic plank in its platform. The Solid South is the national cement that holds the national structure together. So I say, in thundering tones, impeach Judge Waring. DR. D. AITCHISON.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Ball-Bearing, Servo Mechanisms

VIENNA, Austria.—Beneath the exquisite baroque surface of this old city, there are some strange goings on. Vienna is the great spy center of postwar Europe. The rival intelligence services even conduct private wars with one another. Bad feeling between the Yugoslavs and satellite powers, for instance, is said to be the cause of the somewhat startling recent appearance of a whole crop of nine bodies in the Danube.

What is considerably more important, Vienna is also the main entrepot for trade between the Soviet empire and western Europe. A good deal of this trade is of course carried on directly, especially when there are advantages in this method. An order of 100,000 tons of steel rails for Red China has recently been used, for example, to turn the great German industrialists in Duesseldorf against the Western allies, and to woo their support for Soviet-connected German rightist parties.

Yet here in Vienna is Intrac, the vast new trading agency just set up to represent the Soviet Union and all its European satellites, with a view to gaining a stranglehold on the half-secret commerce between East and West. Here in Vienna is where Soviet or satellite agents chiefly come to obtain whatever is forbidden to export to Russia through chains of third and fourth and fifth parties from Switzerland or Belgium or France or elsewhere. Here in Vienna, in short, is the best place to get a line on the progress of Soviet rearmament.

THE DATA available here, it must be added, are far from reassuring. On the one hand, there is nothing about the Soviet trading activities in Vienna to suggest the existence of the desperate shortages of special equipment and mechanisms that have always been expected to slow the completion of the Soviet war machine. On the other hand, there is everything to suggest that the level and intensity of production of weapons beyond the iron curtain even surpasses what was seen during the last war.

The positive evidence is particularly disconcerting. As every one knows who is familiar with the pattern of European armaments production, the two great Soviet prizes in the satellite states were the Skoda works in Czechoslovakia and the Manfred Weiss works in Hungary. At the end of the war, production at both Skoda and Manfred Weiss had collapsed. Skoda suffered the additional blow of the expulsion from Czechoslovakia of a large part of its Sudeten-German skilled labor force.

Now, on the contrary, production at Skoda has reached wartime levels. At the Manfred Weiss works, where the prewar labor force was 16,000 men, nearly three times that number, or 45,000 men, are now working around the clock. Many kinds of weapons, from bazookas to cannon, are being produced. These two great plants are now being operated by the Kremlin as hard as Hitler ever worked them. Meanwhile expansion continues. Skoda recently purchased in Austria the steel frames for six huge new factory buildings.

This information, which is what the intelligence services would classify as 1A, fits perfectly, moreover, with the more fragmentary data available in Germany. There, on the one hand, the Duesseldorf leaders, who still go regularly to the Soviet zone, will tell you that the East German industries received over 500,000 tons of steel—and steel of high quality, too—from the Soviet Union in the past year.

THESE SAME German business leaders also forecast that the westward shipment of steel from Russia should reach one million tons next year, thus indirectly supporting reports from other sources of important Soviet successes in expanding home steel output. In the same line are other German reports of large production of improved V-2's and other guided missiles in East German factories.

To this positive evidence of a powerful and effective Soviet war production effort, must also be added the negative evidence. The sharp eyes in Vienna—and these eyes are very sharp indeed, able to watch almost every eastward shipment of all kinds of goods—have caught no sign that the Soviet rearmament effort is afflicted by more than the normal bottlenecks.

There is great demand for, and heavy purchasing of, certain bulk commodities — scrap iron, rubber, cotton yarn and wool, for instance. In the past year, no major instance has been observed, however, of any Soviet attempt to buy any of the special equipment standing at the very top of the European Cooperation Administration's list of forbidden exports.

Vienna is the first place the Soviet agents would come for ball bearings, radar equipment, servo mechanisms and other such vital contraptions, if the lack of these was a serious problem in Russia. By devious methods, these supposed scarcity items can actually be secured here. But there is no effort to secure them. The implication is that the Soviets are now perfectly able to copy even the most difficult items from purchased patent drawings or stolen designs, or have achieved production of their own designs, perhaps with the help of satellite engineers.

This is a dark picture. No one in his senses can suppose that the Kremlin can be conducting a war production effort going beyond Hitler's, and at the same time cherishing perfectly peaceful intentions. The worst of it is, we have not so very much time left, to face and act upon these hard facts which our leaders, in their Baldwin-like way, are trying to bamboozle us about.

Senators' Protection

By Marquis Childs

Immunity And Discipline

THE DAMAGE suffered by individuals who fall victim to reckless and irresponsible behavior done under the cloak of congressional immunity is immediately apparent. The damage to our institutions is not so apparent.

Childs

But it is nonetheless real and it raises some disturbing questions about what has been happening during recent weeks as a result of Senator McCarthy's indiscriminate charges. Several of the injured individuals have challenged the Senator to say without the protection of his congressional immunity what he has said under that privilege. While seeming to meet this challenge, he has in fact evaded it.

They would sue him for libel or slander if he made the same charge without immunity. It is fairly clear that such a suit could be sustained if witnesses could be found who would swear that Senator McCarthy repeated privately off the floor what he had said under privilege.

I had an experience which throws some light on this. Former Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania charged on the floor of the Senate that I had been paid by a large oil company for writing a story about oil deals in Mexico involving Guffey and John L. Lewis. I learned he had said the same thing to reporters off the floor and I brought suit for slander. After a number of depositions had been taken, Guffey officially apologized on the Senate floor. There was no claim of immunity.

No one can question the right of a legislator to say what he pleases with immunity from prosecution for his remarks. This goes back to the mosts of parliamentary history, and it has been repeatedly sustained by the courts.

In his Commentaries on the Constitution the distinguished American jurist, Joseph Story, held that while the legislator was privileged to make the speech, publication of it would subject him to a charge of libel. Story wrote:

"No man ought to have the right to defame others under the color of a performance of the duties of his office. And if he does so in the actual discharge of his duties in the Congress, that furnishes no reason why he should be able, through the medium of the press, to destroy the reputation and invade the repose of other citizens. It is neither within the scope of his duty nor in the furtherance of public rights or public policy. Every citizen has as good a right to be protected by the law from malignant scandal and false charges and defamatory imputations as a member of Congress has to utter them in his seat. If it were otherwise, a man's character might be taken away without the possibility of redress, either by the malice or indiscretion or overweening self-conceit of a member of Congress."

Later decisions of the courts altered this construction. Bona fide publication was held to be immune from the charge of libel or slander. But, plainly, the responsibility of the legislator was to be assumed as the following from the decision of a Federal court in Washington expresses it:

"Presumably legislators will be restrained in the exercise of such a privilege by the responsibilities of their office. Moreover, in the event of their failure in that regard, they will be subject to discipline by their colleagues."

THERE ARE many, including some Senators themselves, who believe the Senate has suffered damage from the McCarthy affair. This includes Republicans who have disassociated themselves from the McCarthy attacks.

Under the Constitution the Senate and the House have the authority to make their own rules. This includes the right to expel a member for improper behavior by a two thirds vote.

Improper behavior has been taken to mean a crime of the first magnitude, such as treason or some act of moral turpitude. In recent years two members of the Senate were expelled, but they were expelled for acts of fraud committed in their election campaigns. Although they had been allowed to take their seats in the Senate, they had not participated in the Senate's business because of the suspected fraud.

As has been often said, the Senate has many of the attributes of a very exclusive club. The members jealously guard their rights and privileges. Some years ago the charge of homosexuality was imputed against one Senator and the ranks of his fellow members quickly closed round him in defense.

But the public in this instance is entitled at the very least to know the circumstances behind the outbreak. In particular, the influence of the Nationalist China lobby and its paid representatives should be brought to light. If reports of the lobby's role are even partly true, here is an extraordinary instance of the representatives, paid agents and advocates of a foreign power creating something close to chaos in the conduct of American foreign policy. And in the process harm has been done to the institutions of free government.

U. S. Aid in Building Airliners Advocated by Adm. Ramsey

Great Britain is outstripping the United States in the development of new airliners because the English tackled the problem as a "national venture" and backed it with a 300-million-dollar Government subsidy, Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, president of the Aircraft Industries Association, said last night.

Addressing the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, Ramsey said our Government must also help the American aviation industry or we will fall further behind in the field.

Development of a single pure jet or turbo-prop transport prototype will cost at least 20 million dollars, and this "is beyond the reach" of any plane manufacturer or airline, the retired admiral said.

Ramsey said he did not advocate the Government putting up all the money, but that some aid is necessary. He backed a recent proposal by the Air Coordinating Committee, top-level Government aviation policy, which calls for the CAA to pay the cost of flight testing new jet type transport prototypes and pay for necessary experimental flying of such craft on "dummy" airline routes.

Rear Admiral L. B. Richardson, former deputy chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, said national security requires development of a fleet of freight-carrying airplanes but the job is not being done.

"Freight types in use by the airlines today," he told the Institute "are compromises for passenger and cargo operation, comparable to Pullman cars converted to carrying freight."

Richardson now is director of research and development of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., manufacturer of the C-82 and C-119 packets. The packet is a troop carrier and freight plane specifically designed for the purpose for the Air Force.

Richardson said a future war will bring air transport requirements far exceeding those of the past. He said "our jet-speed striking power cannot be maintained by a main force moving at the last war's speed."

Krum Plans Second Run For Congress

Tyrrell Krum, retired Navy officer and authority on veterans' affairs, announced yesterday he will again be a Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth District of Virginia next November.

Krum

Krum will seek the seat held by Representative Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, now completing his 20th year in Congress. He tried unsuccessfully to unseat Smith in 1948, when the veteran legislator gained a 5000-vote plurality over Krum, his nearest rival in a four-way race.

Smith already has announced his intention to seek reelection, subject to the Democratic primary in August.

House Passage of Maybank Bill Expected

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

If the Maybank bill becomes law this session, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will be empowered to insure your bank account up to a limit of $10,000. The present limit is $5000, an amount generally conceded to be too low.

The bill passed the Senate unanimously last month, and is expected to run into no serious opposition in the House. It makes three important changes in the present law: by raising the amount of insurance on individual deposits, by cutting down the premiums which banks must now pay FDIC, and by permitting the corporation to make direct loans to banks which are in danger of failing.

Some 13,440 commercial banks are now insured by the FDIC. This is 95 percent of all commercial banks in the country. About 88 million accounts, or 96 percent of the total, were fully protected under the $5000 limit. It is estimated that with the limit raised to $10,000, 98 percent of all depositors would be covered.

On the other hand, though insured deposits include most depositors, they cover only 45 percent of the total amount deposited. Also, it is hard to tell how many people have split up their deposits among several banks in order to get full coverage. If the limit is lifted, we shall probably see a great many new accounts in the $10,000 bracket as depositors consolidate their holdings.

Against Liquidations

Big depositors as well as small are at present protected by FDIC policy. This is a fact which is not generally understood.

When FDIC first went into operation, it often allowed member banks to close, paying off only those deposits covered by insurance. In recent years, however, it has been corporation policy to avoid bank liquidations because they tended to increase losses. The usual method of dealing with weak banks is now to promote mergers with stronger banks in the same region.

Under the Maybank bill, the corporation would be permitted to make direct loans to banks if it became necessary. This is substantially the function which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation performed during the early 1930s, while the FDIC was getting under way, and it saved many banks from failure.

In effect, the policy of saving banks rather than liquidating them means that all depositors are equally protected. There has been considerable sentiment for making this official and covering all deposits under the law.

It is argued that heavy withdrawals by big depositors could put serious pressure on a member bank, and that such panicky flights of money would be avoided if large depositors felt they were covered by Federal Deposit Insurance.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee rejected this proposal on the grounds that "it should never be the policy of the Congress to guarantee the safety of all deposits in all banks." The present $10,000 limit represents no change in policy, since the wholesale price level has just about doubled during the years the FDIC has been in operation. The higher coverage merely reflects the changing value of the dollar.

One Billion in Reserves

If there is one feature of the Maybank bill open to debate it is the new assessment formula which would reduce the payment of member banks by more than half.

The banks have felt for some time that the reserves are now more than adequate to meet foreseeable emergencies. At the end of 1948 they amounted to more than one billion dollars. Total losses to the corporation since 1934 have only come to 26 million dollars.

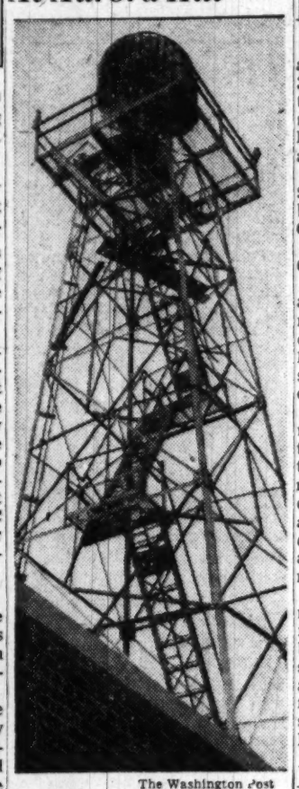

The FDIC at first insisted that the reserves were not yet large enough, in view of the record of bank failures in the early 1930s. However, it has now agreed to the reduced assessments.

The trouble with the formula for cutting payments, however, is that assessments are likely to be low in good years, when banks can afford higher payments, and high in bad years, when they cannot. This feature would intensify both inflations and deflations. The Federal Reserve had proposed a formula with a ten-year moving base.

On the record, FDIC has marked a great advance in American banking.

Both by setting higher banking standards, and by discouraging panics, FDIC has done signal service to our banking system. Deposit insurance cannot by itself guarantee us against depressions. It can only guarantee us against the multiple complications which ensue when a business downturn is accompanied by the total prostration of our banking system.

New Radar Tower At Aurora Hill

The Washington Post
. . . Long-range scanner

National Airport Installing Radar With 30-Mile Range

New radar equipment which will accurately spot incoming airplanes 30 or more miles away, and warn the control tower when a pilot moves as little as 10 feet from his landing course, is being installed at the National Airport.

The new installations, costing $425,000, should be in operation by midsummer, according to Charles F. Horne, acting director of the office of Federal Airways, Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The radar, of the surveillance and precision approach type, will replace ground control approach equipment provided by the Air Force after the war and now obsolete. It is the first of its type developed for civilian use.

The antenna for the surveillance radar—which will allow the controller in the tower to see everything in the sky within a 30-mile radius—already has been perched on a steel tower on Aurora Hill, a mile west of the airport, on the other side of the railroad yards and just off Route 1 and Glebe rd. in Arlington.

The obsolete equipment being replaced was on the field—which is all right for short-range work, but not so good for long-range scanning, officials say. Considerable "clutter" or interference from buildings, and other nearby structures such as the Washington Monument, can sometimes "lose" an airplane on the old GCA radar screen.

"Remoting" the surveillance antenna to its 270-foot elevation a mile from the airport has added about $100,000 to the cost of the new installations, but it's well worth it to get rid of the "blind" spots, officials say. Through its use, pilots can be warned of collision hazards in bad weather by the airport controller.

Beside the 30-mile surveillance scope in the control tower will be the precision approach radar scope used when an airplane is coming in for a landing in bad weather.

Its two antennas are installed at the north end of the field, scanning up the runway and about 10 miles beyond the airport in a southerly direction.

One indicator in the scope shows the "azimuth" or horizontal location of an incoming plane, the other shows the elevation of the craft. Both are compared with straight lines on the scope which indicate the correct landing approach.

Thus, the controller can tell an incoming pilot by radio to turn left, right, up or down to get into the right path. With a plane one mile away, the precision radar will detect deviations from the course as small as 10 feet in elevation or 20 feet in azimuth, CAA officials claim.

Without Painful Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Parents List TV Effects

New York, April 11 (AP).—An organization of parents reported today that television seems to be taking away a little appetite, a little creative instinct and a little peace of mind from the children who look a it.

The United Parents Associations, made up of 305 Parent-Teacher and other organizations, said a survey shows these effects on a "small but significant number" of New York City children:

Those 5 to 7 years old sometimes throw tantrums when the set is shut off, or insist that they eat dinner where they can watch the screen.

Those 8 to 10 tend to rush through meals or eat in the same room as the TV set. Some 9-year-olds resist going to bed and have occasional nightmares.

Those 10 to 13 show more interest in TV than in school subjects, spending less time on sports or hobbies and sometimes getting lower grades in school.

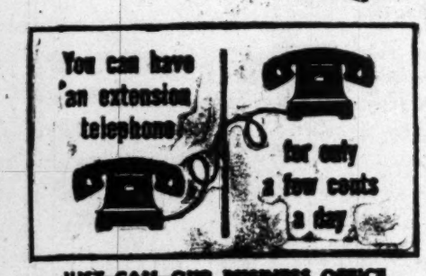

"We've taken the right step to save those extra steps!"

"For my money, our new extension telephone is one of the best bargains we've ever had. Now we can answer the telephone without having to rush downstairs every time it rings. And, of course, we can make calls from either floor. In a day's time, it certainly saves us a lot of time, steps and trouble.

"It's a great comfort, too, to have a telephone close at hand late at night. We know it's handy just in case something should happen. For comfort and convenience, I'd recommend the extension telephone to any family."

Citizens Favor Soldiers Home Partition Plan

The Lamond Heights Citizens Association last night went on record favoring the partitioning of the Soldiers' Home land, together with a road connecting with North Capitol st., and providing for a hospital addition with 200 beds.

The group, meeting at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire ave. ne., opposed Capital Transit's proposed fare increase; opposed application for a zoning adjustment to permit an apartment at 5th and Oglethorpe sts. ne.; and asked the District Commissioners and Congress to pass a bill requiring builders constructing homes in the District to furnish bond against possible loss by the owners for failure to conform with building ordinances.

Thomas Circle

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman's insistence on nonsegregated swimming pools was "deplored" last night by the Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

Instead, the association urged adoption of a compromise plan that would allow interracial swimming at one pool, and would reserve three for whites and two for Negroes.

In other resolutions at the meeting at 1536 16th st. nw., the group indorsed the five-day, 40-hour week for policemen, asked repeal of the District income and personal property taxes, reiterated its opposition to the requested transit fare increase, and asked the Board of Education to reverse its transfer of Central High School and turn the school into administrative headquarters instead.

Fort Dupont

The Fort Dupont Citizens Association admitted 19 new members last night at its meeting in the Hillcrest Playground field house.

The group adopted resolutions approving the Kefauver home-rule bill, the Klein bill to license District contractors, and the McMillan bill to give control of District recreation facilities to the District Commissioners.

A request by the Federation of citizens association that docking facilities for the Hains Point ferry be made available, was also indorsed.

Ching Asks Talks Be Resumed to Avert Ship Strike

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching yesterday appealed to the AFL Master, Mates and Pilots Union and Atlantic and Gulf Coast shippers to resume negotiations in New York Thursday in an effort to avert a maritime strike at midnight Saturday.

Union officials, who notified Ching Monday that negotiations in the on-again-off-again walkout had collapsed, were not immediately available for comment on the Government request. Company officials had said they were willing to continue contract talks.

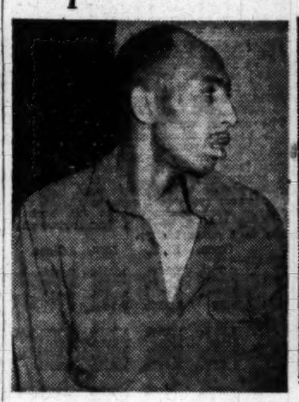

Ching asked the union and the shippers to meet with four of his aides sitting as a special mediation panel. He made the request in telegrams to Capt. Charles F. May, union president, and Frank J. Taylor, president of the Merchant Marine Institute.

floor offices of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co., 2002 11th st. nw.

Two clerks, Mrs. Britania Parmes of 430 Irving st. nw. and Mrs. Maude L. Reed, 5223 E. Capitol st., were alone in the company office. Mrs. Parmes said the men told them to "lie down on the floor." They entered the office, scooped up $1043 in cash, $25 in change and $1350.23 in checks and money orders and fled.

"We've Been Robbed!"

Mrs. Reed followed the two men out of the office, and shouted down the stairs, "we've been robbed!"

Three lawyers with offices on the first floor of the building started chasing the bandits. J. Franklin Bourne said he followed his quarry north on 11th st. in a five block chase which ended when the man caught a cab on Florida ave. and headed south into Vermont ave.

Curtis Mitchell and Leonard S. Hayes, who chased the other man, were joined by Private Walker shortly before Ware entered the 13th st. alley. They abandoned the chase when they saw the fugitive pull his gun and fire at Walker.

After Walker saw the fugitive jump through the window, he called for reinforcements and the 13th st. house was surrounded.

Pvt. David H. Gould, 27, of the Thirteenth Precinct, and Detective Sergt. E. H. Winters, 37, went into the house from the basement of 1937 13th st.

They had to kick down doors to climb to the third floor bedroom where they found Ware.

More than a thousand spectators gathered along the streets when they learned of the robbery.

Police broadcast a lookout for the other robber, whom they said was last seen when he dropped from a Dixie Cab at 6th and Q sts. nw. He was described as a dark-skinned Negro, 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, wearing a mixed grey overcoat and a grey felt hat.

Credit Group Names Two New Directors

By S. Oliver Goodman

Two new directors for the Washington Association of Credit Men, Inc., were announced yesterday.

They are Gordon F. Cooper of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and George Fellabaum of the auto equipment firm of L. S. Jullien, Inc.

The association, which represents 153 wholesale firms in the Washington area, yesterday opened for business in its new and enlarged quarters in the Washington Building. The group formerly was located in the Bowen Building for more than a decade. Secretary-Treasurer John H. Geiger said the shift was necessitated by a largely-increased volume of business and the need for more space.

Thursday night, more than 100 members and guests of the association will hear Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, speak on "What's Ahead for Business." The dinner meeting in the Raleigh Hotel will start at 6:15 p. m. Heimann is well known in Washington, where at various times he has served the Government as chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board, a member of the original committee for the National Recovery Administration and other posts.

AREA PICTURE: Business conditions in the Fifth Federal Reserve District appear "to be relatively strong although the rising momentum has subsided," the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. In its April review, the bank said no serious weakness is evident in the important industries of the region and added "none should probably develop for at least several months." The bank's summary noted increased construction activity, rising sales of new autos, expanding furniture sales, an upturn in cotton textile production and a stable employment picture.

NEW TREASURER: C. B. Koontz, newly elected treasurer of Capital Transit Co., is a veteran of 43 years service with the company. He joined Capital Traction Co. in 1907 as a bookkeeper was appointed assistant treasurer in 1920 and remained in post during the merger with Capital Transit Co. in 1933. On Monday, he was elevated to treasurer, succeeding Henry D. Crampton who retired after 54 years service. Koontz, born in Baltimore in 1880, was educated at Baltimore City College and George Washington University.

The bonds were reoffered publicly from 0.60 for those due Septemper 1, 1952. to 1.90 percent for 1979 maturities.

Officers of the new invstment firm are listed as Charles R. Connolly, president; Joseph R. Donaldson and George S. Elmore, vice presidents; Edward P. Terry, secretary and treasurer.

The Business Outlook

Small Auto Maker Helps Big 3 Maintain Competitive Front

By J. A. Livingston

LOUIS J. WALINSKY, member of the staff of Robert R. Nathan Associates, economic consultants to Philip Murray and the CIO, takes me to task for declaring that General Motors' great success poses a price-wage dilemma. I wrote:

General Motors is not a "free" agent in disposing of its profits. Sure, it could raise wages, but that would set a higher pattern for the industry" and might force competitors out of business. Nor can G. M. "willy-nilly cut prices." Again, it might squeeze competitors. Either way the company courts antitrust action.

Livingston

In a letter to The Washington Post, Mr. Walinsky wrote: "Either course threatens to lessen competition in the automotive industry and render the corporation more liable to attack on monopoly charges. [That] would rule out competitive pricing and improvement of wages in any industry where one or more large companies commanded a sizeable share of the market" and was more efficient than smaller companies. "In other words, the way to preserve competition is to abandon competitive practices."

THAT'S A NICE twist, but . . .

As I see it, competition is not determined by the number of companies in an industry. You coudl actually increase competition by forcing a competitor out of business, if the remaining companies scrambled for the business. Moreover, the real competition in autos, as Mr. Walinsky points out, is among G. M., Chrysler, and Ford—the Big Three.

G. M., Chrysler, and Ford are constantly jockeying to gain sales at the expense of one another. Ford dealers are encouraged to "sell" Chevrolets off the road and vice versa. Henry Ford 2d has openly declared that his ambition is to regain leadership in the low-priced field from the Chevvie.

But, as far as the Big Three in autos are concerned, there's a real advantage in keeping the smaller companies alive. The Big Three already dominate 85 percent of the passenger car sales and 75 percent of the truck market. They wouldn't pick up substantial additional sales by a price-wage squeeze on the independents. Moreover, the existence of the independents makes the Big Three less vulnerable to antitrust attack, just as, for the opposite reason, G. M.'s bigness shields Ford and Chrysler.

If there were 10,000 auto companies, there'd be no problem. Competition would be taken for granted. But in the passenger car industry, where there are only 10 companies, every company counts in public relations. The seven independent companies are not only competitors in a real sense, but they also preserve, for the benefit of the public, the appearance of competition.

A COMMON MISTAKE is to assume that price, and price alone, determines the intensity of competition. Actually companies compete in many ways: By getting a product accepted; by charging what people will say is a "fair price"; by having good community relations and public relations, which means doing those things that make people think well of the company so that they're inclined to buy its product and avoiding actions which people will regard as reprehensible. In this last connection, good labor relations is important.

Such consideration won't necessarily result in the lowest price. After all, a corporation doesn't base its price on its own efficiency, but on its efficiency relative to the companies in its industry. And General Motors, with its 400,000 employes, is more than a business, a moneymaking, organization. It's a political and social institution. For survival, it must do those things which the public and the Government will accept.

Take an extreme supposition. Suppose G. M. could undersell all competitors out of business. Could it afford to do so? The answer, I think, is "No." It would be broken up as a monopoly.

What is really comes down to is this. Size limits freedom of action, of decision. The bigger a company gets, the more frequently and carefully it must take its size into account in making its decisions. Some economists, like Mr. Walinsky, may not like this. They may regard it as diseconomic or as a factor lessening price competition. What's more, I would not call it noncompetitive. It's competitive self-preservation. By it, a big company stays in business, intact, and remains a strong competitor.

New York Cotton

New York, April 11 (AP).—Cotton futures were strong and active today as trade and commission house buying pushed all deliveries from July 1950 forward, into new seasonal high ground. Only nearby May declined under pressure of liquidation prior to first notice day on April 25. Final prices were 25 to 85 cents a bale higher, except nearby May which closed 10 cents a bale lower.

Mines Urged To Retrench By U. S. Aide

St. Louis, Mo., April 11 (AP).—James Boyd, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, advised the mining industry today to get ready for retrenchment.

Boyd said also the Eighty-first Congress has made it clear that "the door is virtually closed" for price support and production subsidies.

An increasing population and expanded per capita consumption of metals makes for a more favorable long-range outlook, however, Boyd added in an address before the American Zinc Institute.

"I appreciate that it is not very consoling for those who are mining non-ferrous ores to realize that in the long run the future may be bright but meanwhile they may go out of business," Boyd said. He added:

"The postwar stockpiling program has unfortunately added to the uncertainties of the industry.

"International affairs forced accelerated action before the backlog of civilian demand was satisfied, and budgetary limitations forced curtailment in mineral and metal procurement for the stockpile at about the time consumers' inventories had reached a saturation point. . . .

$200,000 Gain In Coffee Deal Cited at Probe

Senate investigators yesterday accused Bazilian dealers of forcing up coffee prices in the United States by holding back supplies in Brazil.

The charge was made at a turbulent meeting of a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee investigating the high price of coffee.

Committee Counsel Paul E. Hadlick said that Brazilian merchants are buying 90 percent of future coffee supplies on the New York coffee exchange, while at the same time holding back their own coffee in Brazil.

He said this was forcing prices up for American consumers, and giving the Brazilians fabulous profits. He said one Brazilian dealer made more than $200,000 in nine months by speculating with only $3000.

Then Hadlick turned his wrath on members of the New York Coffee Exchange, who were present.

"You make your contracts and get your commission, and you don't give a damn what happens to the people who buy coffee," he said.

Subcommittee Chairman Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), added that the exchange is being run "for the benefit" of the Brazilian dealers.

Robert E. Atkinson, exchange president, said his trading mart is not responsible for the jump in coffee prices last fall. Prices went up, he insisted, because of "scare buying" here and bad crops in Brazil.

"There has been no manipulation, there has been no corner on the market," he asserted.

Hedda Looks at Hollywood

Guns Are Hogging The Movie Titles

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, April 11.—It'll likely be Leif Erickson for "The Gun," which Al Rogell directs. The part was originally intended for Edmond O'Brien. Incidentally, those shooting irons are sure getting into our titles: "The Gunfighter," "Winchester 73," "Colt 45," and "Smiler With a Gun." Would it be asking too much for a romance called "Love"?

When I heard that Lana Turner and Bob Topping were motoring to Ensenada in a trailer, I couldn't believe it. So I called Metro's leading actress. She said: "What! O, you're talking about the luggage trailer we're taking along. I'm strictly a cold bird and champagne girl. When you see me in a trailer, you'll be right in there with me." "Yes," said I, "and if that ever happens I'll be doing the cookin'." "You've said it, honey," replied Lana . . . The Toppings canceled their trip to the Orient to finish repairs and decoration on their house. Lana said, "After all this time, we might just as well have it right, and the way we want it, and then take a trip."

BEN JOHNSON and Harry Carey, jr., join John Wayne in "Rio Brava," which John Ford directs. The picture will be shot near Moab, Utah, in the same locale as "Wagon Master." Ford predicts that Ben Johnson will be a top Western star. I don't think there's any doubt about it, and Bing Crosby could use some of those songs Forest Ranger Stan Jones wrote for "Wagon Master." They are great. Bing hasn't had a real good tune in two years. And he'd better do something about it, too.

Yvonne de Carlo after tackling Aladdin, Omar Kiam, and Sinbad in "Desert Hawk," will meet up with Genghis Kahn himself in her next "Samarkand." She'll play a Cleopatra-ish type of siren who gives the old warrior the woo-hoo. When Yvonne was in Italy, the boys there told her her screen love-making was too much rose water and not enough heavy wine. They want more oomph . . . Yvonne's current beau, Rock Hudson, is with her in "Desert Hawk." He's a handsome stalwart about twice her size. Before he starting acting, he was a mail carrier.

Betty Hutton will have Hoagy Carmichael and Johnny Mercer doing the music for "The Mabel Norman Story." Betty doesn't forget that Hoagy composed "Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief," which she sang in "Stork Club"; and Johnny wrote "Accentuate the Positive," which she and Bing Crosby did in "Here Come the Waves."

HUMAN CENTIPEDE: Angna Enters is en route to England for a special showing of her paintings at the Brooks gallery. She has a new book coming out this fall, and before leaving finished a mural at the University of Washington's Penthouse Theater.

Bill Paley and his wife sail for Europe, April 22, on the same ship with the Sam Goldwyns and Bob Sherwood. Sherwood joins the Goldwyns in a motor trip through France and Italy, which means we'll have another Sherwood script for pictures . . . Nancy Guild showed up at Otto Preminger's party for the newlywed Johnny Meyers with Ernie Martin. Johnny, following the new pattern of the King of England, appeared in green and blue plaid dinner jacket.

Arthur Loew, jr., with a Lord Byron collar and flowing tie, was with Janet Leigh. Also there were the Oleg Cassinis, Charlie Morrisons, Chubby Broccoli and Mrs. Buddy Clark. Brynie Foy and I got into a hassle over politics. I forgot the rule never to mention religion or politics at a party . . . "Cost of Living" didn't include the cost of the flowers Evelyn Keyes received when she was sprung from Columbia and started that picture. Her dressing room overflowed with posies.

REPEAT SHOT: In "Stage Fright," Alfred Hitchcock repeats a scene he's evidently fallen in love with for a third time. Rain falls on a sea of black umbrellas at a garden party. It's effective, and was brilliant the first time we saw it . . . The sensation of "Stage Fright" is Marlene Dietrich, whose sense of comedy timing equals Ina Claire's. Marlene looks younger than she did when she was younger.

JIMMY "SHAMROCK" ELLISON and Russ "Lucky" Haydon seem to have the draw here on Hirsh de La Viez, chairman of the Variety Rodeo Committee, but the victim isn't worried. Because the rodeo is certainly pulling the small fry in. The two screen cowboys are here conducting a "Gallop Poll" to determine whether youngsters like to see the cowboy kiss the heroine at the end of a Western. They were guests of the Variety Club at luncheon yesterday, and appeared in the rodeo last night

Noren Hurts Hand as Nats, Athletics End Up, 7-7

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 11.—If he were the type, Little Bobby Shantz could throw his weight around and strut somewhat among his fellow members of the Athletics, despite his mere 144 pounds. He's getting to be something special in Connie Mack's pitching plans.

POVICH

In fact, Mr. Mack is letting it be known that when his A's open the season at Griffith Stadium April 18, his tiny lefthander, Master Shantz, will be his pitcher. He's the only pitcher Mr. Mack owns, including his young 20-game winner of last season, Alex Kellner, who has been pitching like a big leaguer this spring.

The other day in Florida, Shantz was rushed into the game for a two-inning stint and proceeded to strike out four of the six Nats he faced. If the Nats were surprised, the A's weren't. Last season they tabbed him as a considerable artist on the pitching mound.

He's no bigger than a minute, and is sometimes confused with the A's batboy. In fact, it appears that he could walk underneath some of those strikes he throws. But out of his pitching fist come a fast ball, honest, a fast ball, that is one of the smokier pitches in the American League.

MR. MACK'S fondness for Shantz is of comparatively recent date. Last July, Mr. Mack was so unimpressed with the lad he sent him to the A's Buffalo farm for more experience. The next day when the A's started West and a couple of Mack's pitchers came down with the miseries and he faced the prospect of a road trip with only four hurlers, he recalled Shantz.

The young man never donned a uniform at Buffalo. He grabbed a plane for Detroit, and two hours later found himself relieving Dick Fowler in the third inning with a man on third and nobody out. For the next nine innings, honest, he held the Tigers hitless, and won his game in the thirteenth. He'd made the team.

Young Shantz came out of his native Pottstown as the star outfielder of the Pottstown high. On the Philadelphia sandlots, he turned pitcher, was signed by an A's scout named Harry O'Donnell. Asked if he was given a bonus by the A's, he says,

"Yeah, a great big handshake, by O'Donnell."

THE A'S TESTED him first in the Class B Western League, with Lincoln, Nebr., in 1948. Shantz did very well out there, 18 wins, only seven defeats, and they brought him up in 1949. After that brief Buffalo interlude, he won six games lost eight for the A's in relief roles. That was a heap better than some of Mr. Mack's supposedly good pitchers.

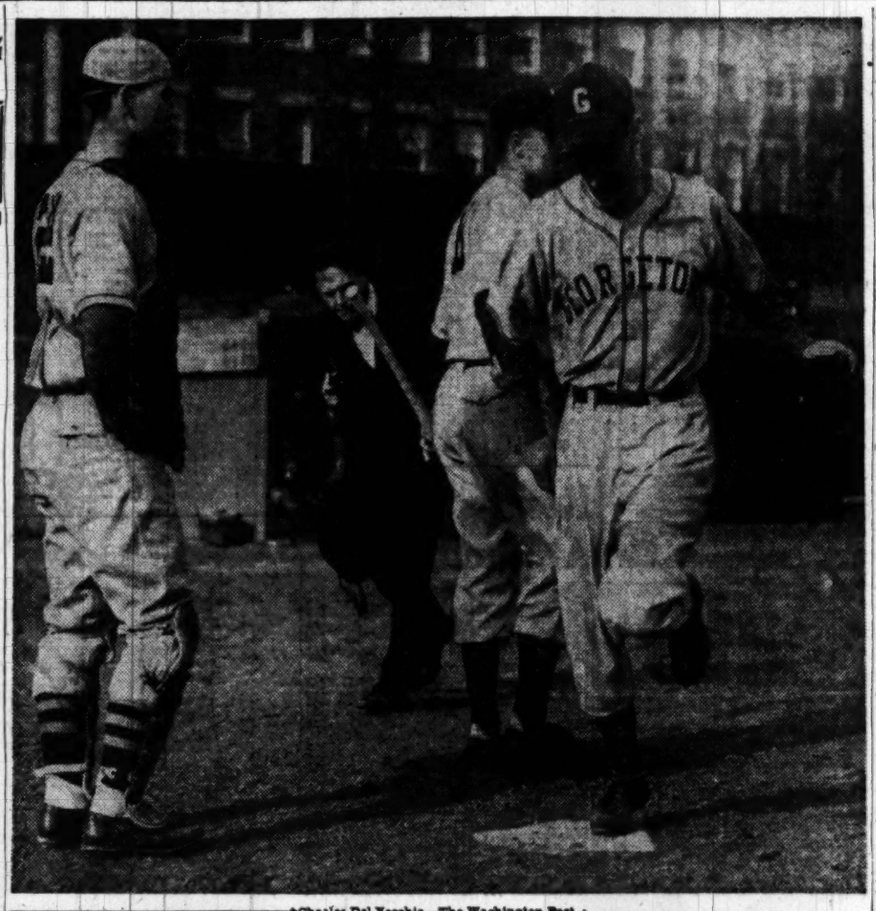

There's a special respect for young Shantz now, whenever he pitches. Despite his left-handedness and the traditions of young southpaws, Shantz isn't wild. He averaged only four walks per game last season, and out in the middle of the diamond, he's a fifth infielder. "Only a fool would try to bunt against him," says Jimmy Dykes, "he's a cat out there."

Shantz takes a stout ticker out to the mound with him, says Dykes. "He'll throw his fast ball at DiMaggio and Williams and the rest. And challenge 'em. Anyway, I never question the heart of any little pitcher in the big leagues. They don't fight their way up there unless they are long on courage, like those other little fellows, Mickey Haefner, Harry Brecheen and Chick Pieretti."

MR. MACK is getting no particular pleasure in his consideration of the A's pitching staff otherwise. He had to give up on Phil Marchildon, and sent him to Buffalo. Two of his other former stalwarts, Dick Fowler and Joe Coleman have sore arms of indefinite duration. Fowler under treatment for bursitis, has been told not to touch a baseball for 20 days.

The A's were a far better team in February than they are in April. On paper, a couple of months ago, they were looking somewhat forbidding. Their pitchers aren't ready, their catching is weak, and their outfield isn't solid. Mickey Cochrane, hired to coach the pitching, is quite pained by what he has seen.

Bases on balls cost the A's "at least" 40 games last year, points out Dykes. "Our guys issued 714 walks. Any timid batters didn't have to worry. They always knew they could stand on the plate and they wouldn't get hit. It was the safest place in the park, when our guys were pitching."

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

Homer Starts It

Steve Korfonta of Georgetown University crosses home plate on a home run that set off a six-run rally by the Hoyas in the eighth inning for a 8-4 victory yesterday over Syracuse University. Georgetown teammate with bat in hand is Frank Alagia. Umpire watching closely to see that Korfonta touches the plate is Jack Mattingly. Syracuse catcher is Dutch Botterer

Kozar Hit By Bounder; Grasso Gets 3-Run Homer

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Charlotte, N. C., April 11.—Mickey Grasso pumped a three-run homer over the left field wall in the seventh inning to give the Nats a three-run lead over the A's tonight, but they couldn't make it stick. At the end of 11 innings, the two teams adjourned with a 7-7 tie, taking three wounded members with them to a waiting train, and happy to have lived through the fracas.

For a brief spell, disaster appeared to have struck the Nats ranks when Irv Noren, the $70,000 rookie outfielder from the Coast League, was struck on the hand by a Hank Wyse pitch in the third inning.

Luckily for Noren, it was his right and non-throwing hand, and the pitch happily picked the meaty part between the thumb and index finger.

Kozar Gets Hit in Mouth

Noren submitted to X-rays at Memorial Hospital, but felt confident the injury was minor. "At worst, I won't be able to grip a bat for a couple of days," he said, an opinion in which Trainer Doc Lentz concurred. "It doesn't look like a fracture" said Lentz. The X-ray results will be known tomorrow.

Second Baseman Al Kozar was the Nats' second casualty. He got a bust in the mouth from a freak hop of a grounder off Wally moses' bat, and was forced out of the game.

The A's didn't escape unscathed. Bespectacled Eddie Joost, their shortstop, was hit in the face by a bad hop of Mickey Grasso's grounder in the ninth. He went down but got up at a count of nine and stayed in the game.

The 5,012 fans who filled Griffith Park got an eyeful of B League ball for the most part, with Dick Weik and Jim Pearce of the Nats, and three Philadelphia pitchers tossing 19 walks, two wild pitches and a hit batsman into the contest.

Pearce wasn't able to hold the three-run lead Grasso's homer gave him in the seventh. He was clipped for two runs by the A's in the eighth when they tapped out three infield hits, including Moses' apparent double-play grounder that leaped almost into Kozar's mouth.

Stewart Drops Liner

In the eighth, Pearce was only one strike away from a 7-6 victory when with two A's on base and two out, he had a two strike count on Wally Moses. The rookie saw his lead vanish when Eddie Stewart dropped a line drive at his shoetops. Moses was credited with a single.

Pearce, however was somewhat impressive despite the seven hits he allowed in five innings, and merited a longer look from Manager Bucky Harris.

Weik's wildness contributed to the A's 4-3 lead in the first five innings. Wyse, who started for the A's, also was wild, but the Nats rapped him for three hits and three runs in the third with Stewart pounding a two-run double.

Early in the seventh, the Nats got the tying run off their old pal, Ed Klieman, without making a hit, and with the help of Dillinger's horrible wild throw to second.

With the score at 4-4 later in the inning, and Vollmer and Kozar on base, Grasso entered the Nats' home run ranks for the first time this spring. He unloaded a terrific drive over the left field wall.

IN SHORT . . . Charlotte was the jumping-off place for Hal Keller, rookie catcher of the Nats. He was shipped to their Augusta, Ga., farm club . . . The Nats are now down to 28 players, only three above the prescribed limit for May 18, and at least three rookie pitchers are expendable . . . Ed Hurley, the AL umpire who is traveling with the Nats, hasn't worked their last two games: bad ankle that was hit by a foul tip . . .

'This Is Still a Free Country'

Gov. Dewey Vetoes Bill Preventing 'Split' Double-headers in Brooklyn

Albany, N. Y., April 11 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today vetoed a bill that would have prevented major league baseball clubs from staging "split" double-headers, with double admission fees.

"This is still a free country," Dewey observed in vetoing a bill introduced by a Brooklyn Dodger fan, Assemblyman Lawrence P. Murphy.

The Brooklyn Democrat said his bill was aimed at stopping what he called "the common practice" at Ebbets Field of playing morning and afternoon games, or afternoon and evening games on double-header days. Fans must pay two admissions to see both games.

He maintained that a double-header should mean two games for the price of one.

In a memorandum, Dewey wrote:

"It is not the business of the State to determine by law when baseball games shall be played in the absence of any showing that the health, welfare or safety of the people is involved."

Frost Is Ace Twice Within Three Weeks

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

JERRY LONG, Managing Pro of the Rock Creek Golf Course is authority for an amazing links performance. . . . Eddie Frost, of Washington, sank not one but two holes-in-one within three weeks, both on the same hole.

Frost dropped his first ace in the cup three weeks ago on hole No. 11 at Rock Creek. Last Friday he did it again.

"And me a golfer for over 20 years and never a hole-in-one," moaned Long. The distance was 145 yards.

A colorful golf rivalry has entered its 1950 phase at Fort Dupont golf course. For 25 years Dan Chase, executive director of the New York City Park Association, and his brother-in-law, Henry W. Bearce, formerly head of the Weights and Measures Unit of the Bureau of Standards here, have conducted a "grudge" match with an old belt as a trophy.

The belt has changed hands 10 times during the last quarter century on links from Maine to Florida. Chase won this year's match 3 and 2 in 18 holes.

BUDDY SMITH, brother-in-law of Ed Jones, assistant pro at Prince Georges, took up golf less than a year ago but now shoots in the 70's.

Golfers who have a hard time tearing themselves away from their television sets can now have their golf and vidio, too. Al Houghton, Prince Georges pro, goes on Du Mont television with a program of golf tips Thursday.

Northeast golfers will note that Roger Peacock's driving range has moved from Riggs and Agar rds. in Hyattsville to New Hampshire ave., across from the Naval Ordnance Lab.

Detroit Wins, 4-1, Leads in Stanley Cup

Detroit, April 11 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings poured in four goals in a lopsided second period as they whipped the New York Rangers, 4 to 1, tonight to move into a one game lead in the Stanley Cup hockey championship series.

The Detroiters gave New York goalie Chuck Rayner a bad time in the second period as they banged 16 shots on him, four of them getting through.

This is how the Red Wings scored:

The first was on a 10-footer by Joe Carveth with George Gee and Pete Babando getting assists.

Gee scored next, he caught his own rebound and poked in a five footer with Johnny Wilson getting the assist.

It took Detroit just 34 seconds more to strike again for goal No. 3 as Jim McFadden poked a short one through Rayner's legs at 10:06.

Henrich's Knee OK, Says Doctor

Baltimore, April 11 (AP).—"Don't worry about it," Tom Henrich, New York Yankee baseball star, said he was told today by a specialist he consulted about his sore knee.

The stellar outfielder and first baseman came here to have Dr. George Bennett, bone specialist, look at the knee which has been bothering Henrich during spring training.

Lee Gains AAU Semifinals

Boston, April 11 (AP).—Streamlined Norval Lee of Washington, a Howard University student, made gigantic strides toward a National AAU boxing championship by blasting out burly Nick Vasquez of Fort Bragg, N. C., in the second round of their quarterfinal bout tonight at the Boston Garden.

Lee, the National Golden Gloves titlist and an alternate on the 1948 United States Ompic team, cavorted like a speedy welterweight as he leveled the courageous paratrooper with vicious straight lefts and rights to the head.

The most stunning upset registered during the two afternoons and as many nights of glove-swinging came when Willie Davis, experienced Washington 135-pounder was outpointed in decisive fashion by Wendall Delorme of Portland, Ore., another straight-punching specialist.

Davis had advanced to the quarter finals with two speedy knockouts and was rated close to Lee, his heavyweight townsman, for the tourney's top individual honors.

Earlier, in the afternoon, Davis tko'd Earl Williams of Honolulu in 25 seconds of the second round.

Snead Accepts Bid

Fort Worth, Tex., April 11 (AP).—Sam Snead, leading money-winner in golf, today accepted a bid to play in the $15,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament here.

Hoyas Trip Syracuse, 8-4; G. W. Romps

Georgetown broke loose for six runs in the eighth inning, erased a 4-2 deficit and scored an 8-4 triumph over Syracuse yesterday on the Hilltop.

Steve Korfonta led off the Hoyas' eighth with a home run to bring Georgetown to within one run, 4-3. The victors then put together four singles, three walks and a long fly for five more runs.

It was Georgetown's fourth win in six starts. Syracuse has won one game and lost three.

GW Takes Richmond, 10-3, Tivnan Grand Slams

Richmond, Va., April 11 (AP).—Jack Tivnan's grand slam home run in the seventh inning was the clinching blow today in George Washington University's 10-to-3 victory over the University of Richmond Spiders.

The circuit smash had been preceded by four errors by the Richmond infield, which came to pieces at the seams as six Colonials crossed the plate.

Up to the fateful seventh, the Spiders were in hailing distance of the Washingtonians, who led at that time, 3 to 1, behind the steady pitching of Tim Shanks.

Not a Bad Twist—

Justice and Walker, Single-Wing Guys, Are Cashing In on T (Shirt) Business

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

DOAK WALKER and Charlie Justice, who ran to football glory from the single-wing formation, are now racking up financial yardage from the T—the T-shirt business. They're receiving handsome profits from the sale of the little cotton shirts bearing "The Doaker" and "Choo-Choo" autographs . . . Don Lofgran, of San Francisco U., and several other All-America basket ball players rejected bids to play with the touring College All-Stars against the Harlem Globe-trotters to retain their amateur status, but their motives weren't as lofty as they seem. Lofgran & Co., are merely waiting for offers from teams in the fast California Amateur League which pays higher salaries than many pro clubs . . . The most excited Lone Ranger fan in town is not the little kid who lives next door, but 80-year-old Clark Griffith who's going down to the National Guard Armory shortly to see his hero—in person . . . Beau Jack, who'll pick up in the neighborhood of $1000 for fighting ancient Lew Jenkins at Uline Arena Friday, holds the record for appearing in Madison Square Garden as a main-eventer with a dozen top billings . . .

LU GAMBINO

Dear Folks:

The press box gang here gave me the raspberry for going to Charles Town Monday. "Why not stay here and see some real racing?" they chided. So what happens? Stroll from Sunshine Park wins the first race; Numbers, bred by Mrs. Helene W. Boyle of Charles Town wins the second, and Aura Lee, from Charles Town, wins the third. That made it my turn to rib. Relius, long a popular Maryland horse humanely was destroyed here yesterday after falling in the stretch. Greek Ship, Sunglow and Blue Zac are being shipped here for the Chesapeake Stakes on Saturday. Former Jockey Bill Nertney was asked if he was going to try a riding comeback. He said "The way I feel now all I could ride would be a taxi."—BILL.

Bows&Knots Takes Fifth, Pays $129

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., April 11. There wasn't any dust on the 'Graw track today but Kinsman and his legion of backers bit the dust, if you know what I mean.

The Whirlaway colt, who whipped among others Oil Capitol and Theory in Florida last winter, was a "no-excuses" third in a race named the Dandelion, featuring the Tuesday program.

Greentree Stable's Androcles, candidate for the Derby, Preakness and Belmont, was the winner by two lengths over Mrs. W. H. Labrot's Balkan. Johnny Gilbert replaced Ted Atkinson, Androcles' regular rider and left nothing to be desired.

The winning colt, who probably will go postward in Saturday's $20,000 Chesapeake Stakes, paid a $14 mutuel and was clocked in 1:12 over a track termed fast but slightly on the dull side as the result of rain this morning.

$129.20 Winner

The afternoon's biggest individual monetary splurge came in the fifth race when Bows and Knots won at a $129.20 mutuel. The victory was the first of the year in Maryland for Mrs. Ada L. Rice who has invested heavily in horses. Likewise it was the first victory anywhere for Apprentice Jockey Salvaggio, an 18-year-old Brooklyn boy.

The daily double, on the 9-1 combination, paid a healthy $357.80. Mrs. Jim O'Brey's Stroll didn't walk but ran to victory in the first race at $21.80. The second event found a chosen few playing Numbers and the 2-year-old filly hung up a $26.80 mutuel.

The Federal Diary

Promotions for Service Passed Up in New Civil Service Policy Outline

Promotions based on length of service would be abandoned throughout Government under a seven-point policy statement issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

Each Federal agency will be required to set up a clear-cut promotion program under general standards laid down by Civil Service. No mention is made of seniority in the standards that emphasize merit.

The general idea of the program is to encourage Federal agencies to fill their better jobs by promotion of their own able employes. Employes would be trained and assisted by the agencies to prepare themselves for better jobs. The seven-point Civil Service policy provides:

1. Qualifications for promotion shall be realistic in terms of kind and quality of work to be performed, but the requirements for all jobs shall not be less than minimum Civil Service entrance standards.

2. Selections shall be made from a broad area to give, for example, clerical people a chance to break into the professional ranks. Persons from the outside shall be considered in order to fill jobs with the best-qualified people on a merit basis;

3. All employes who meet the minimum qualifications for promotion shall be considered for any opening. Several agencies are planning to hold competitive tests of their own to fill vacancies under this provision;

4. Employes selected for promotions shall be released from their jobs within a reasonable length of time;

5. The agencies must consult their own employes in drafting their own promotion programs. The commission set a good example for the agencies by consulting personnel people and employe leaders on its policy statement;

6. Advice and assistance shall be made available to employes who are interested in developing themselves for promotions, and,

7. The promotion programs shall be made available to agency employes in writing.

Chairman Harry B. Mitchell said an effective promotion system is essential to a well-rounded career service. He has been working on the promotion plan for months. Incidentally, Civil Service will check on the agencies to make sure they are carrying out the promotion policy.

CAREER BILL: Nonveterans have about given up all hope for approval by Congress at this session of the bill to give them a better chance to keep their jobs during layoffs. A group of career nonveterans has been told that at least half a dozen Senators will object to the Langer bill on the Senate calender to place nonveterans with 15 or more years of service on an equal footing with veterans during layoffs, and that the House committee has voted to bury the Klein bill to give nonveterans a similar break.

Off the record, most members of Congress are agreed that something similar to the Langer-Klein bills should be passed, but they are frank enough to say it can't be done in an election year because of opposition from the veteran groups. The bills will get consideration next year, maybe, if the layoff of long-service career nonveterans continues.

LEAVE: A Navy employe writes: "I'm glad to see someone try to bring out the facts on our leave. In our office are 62 employes. Last year we took an average of 178 hours of annual leave, or slightly more than 22 days. But we worked an average of 154 hours of unpaid overtime. Besides, 11 of us lost a total of 105 days of annual leave. So, in reality, based on time lost from our jobs, we had an average of less than three days of leave." As requested here Sunday, we'll be glad to publicize agency records on leave lost and unpaid overtime worked.

NOTES: Management improvements in the Internal Revenue Bureau will be discussed at 8 p. m., today at a meeting of the American Society for Public Administration in the General Services auditorium, 18th and F sts. nw. Revenue Commissioner George J. Schoeneman and members of his staff will speak. You're invited . . . Federal workers in the downtown area will be given time off this afternoon to greet the Chilean President .

2 Girls, Age 4, Among 43 Receiving U. S. Citizenship

The Washington Post

NEW CITIZENS—Diana Meredith, 4, (left) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Oakes, 3319 O st. nw., and Barbara Ann, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Judah Bercovitz, 412 Oneida pl. ne., were naturalized as American citizens yesterday. Believed to be the youngest ever naturalized in the District they charmed a crowded courtroom during a ceremony before District Court Judge Richmond B. Keech

Two four-year-old girls were naturalized yesterday in a citizenship ceremony at District Court.

The children, believed by court officials to be the youngest ever naturalized here, were among 43 persons who received their citizenship before Judge Richmond B. Keech.

The little girls are Diana M. Oakes of 3319 O st. nw., born in England, and Barbara Ann Bercovitz of 412 Oneida pl. ne., of Canada. Both were adopted by American parents.

They were present during the lengthy ceremony but did not take the oath, being represented by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Oakes and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Judah Bercovitz.

Both girls were impressed—in their own fashions—by the serious occasion.

Diana had her own comment when Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wisc.) mentioned during a speech that we all are "made of clay." Diana wanted to know whether she could be "sculpted."

Barbara thought for a time during the ceremony she was going to be made a policeman.

The citizens were welcomed by Mrs. Roy E. Heywood of Portland, Me., national chairman of the citizenship committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Those naturalized included:

City Meets 103 Pct. of Quota As Red Cross Drive Ends

The 1950 American Red Cross fund campaign in the Washington area went over the top yesterday, attaining 103.79 percent of the $1,039,000 quota.

The grand total of $1,078,372 in contributions reported up to yesterday's final campaign report luncheon is almost exactly $60,000 more than the total for last year.

The Washington chapter reached the highest percentage of quota in a list of 15 large cities of the Nation, as of yesterday, Randolph G. Bishop, campaign director, announced.

All 10 units in the drive went over their quotas. The deadline for the drive this year was extended from March 31 to April 10.

The local drive, which included adjacent Virginia and Maryland counties and Alexandria, drew 296,522 contributors. Additional contributions will be accepted through April 27, and the total number of contributors may exceed last year's final figure of 309,000, Bishop said.

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, principal speaker at the final report session, declared Washington citizens "have to do a lot of homework" to learn "how to live and work in peace with our neighbors."

A-bombs, H-bombs and other military defenses are not necessarily the greatest defense on earth against the next war, he said, as the greatest defense "lies in your own heart."

"If we can't learn to live with our neighbors in peace," he said, "how can we learn to live in peace with the other people of the world who have different ideologies?"

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director and campaign chairman for Montgomery County, said he had learned a lot about "working with my neighbors" in the drive, and warned that the United States three or four times had "made the great mistake of thinking they won the 'last' war."

Drive totals reported by the unit chairmen yesterday, with quota percentages, were as follows:

Booths, $9231 (131.88 percent); city (smaller business offices), $45,411 (114.96 percent); residential, $90,355 (113.09 percent); Alexandria, $21,432 (110.48 percent); Fairfax, $20,675 (105.49 percent); Prince Georges, $22,975 (104.44 percent); Government, $502,363 (103.15 percent); Arlington, $26,181 (101.87 percent); Montgomery, $42,197 (100.71 percent), and general business, $297,548 (100.18 percent.)

James T. Berryman, Washington Star cartoonist, reporting for Mrs. Berryman, who was unable to be present, awarded brass doorknockers to six volunteer workers of the residential unit for outstanding work.

They were James A. Faithful, Congress Heights, who had the highest residential unit quota percentage; Mrs. Vera Thorne of Anacostia, runnerup; Mrs. William L. Hoeke, leading in Friendship Heights; Mrs. Lindsay Silvester, leading in Burleith; Mrs. Helen Keenan, leading in Petworth, and Walter Masincup, leading in Woodridge.

Morris Gets 6 Months In Car Death

Rockville Doctor Given Stern Lecture As Judge Sentences Him for Fatality

A 34-year-old Maryland psychiatrist was given a 20-minute tongue lashing and sentenced to six months in prison for reckless driving in Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday.

He is Dr. Robert Roy Morris, director of the Montgomery County Mental Hygiene Clinic, and for three years a naval medical officer.

Dr. Morris was convicted a week ago of reckless driving in a four-car collision on the Rockville Pike on Easter Sunday, 1949, in which a 17-year-old Pennsylvania girl lost her life.

Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward heard six character witnesses testify in praise of Dr. Morris' professional and executive ability before sentencing him.

"It would be very pleasant to me if I could say to you, 'You are a man of ability and prominent in the community. You can pay a fine and walk away'," the judge said.

"But you killed a girl through your reckless driving. I am of the opinion the jury could very well have found you guilty of manslaughter. If it had convicted you of that charge, I might have considered giving you a large fine, but the maximum fine for reckless driving ($100) is totally inadequate. I regret to have to sentence you, but I feel it is my duty."

Listens Impassively

Dr. Morris listened to the sentence impassively, but his pretty, new wife broke into uncontrollable sobs. Dr. Morris spent last night in the Rockville jail, and is scheduled to start serving his sentence in the Maryland House of Correction today.

Dr. Morris has fought hard for his freedom during the year since the accident. He found his key witness only after telling newspapers that he was looking for a gray-haired woman wearing a hearing aid. He said he had nudged bumpers with her car on the Rockville Pike and was unaware he had hit any other car.

He was arrested two days later on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Juliette Ann Fleck of Youngwood, Pa.

Dr. Morris was convicted May 2, 1949 in Bethesda Police Court and sentenced to one year in prison for manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident. He was also convicted of reckless driving, but sentence was suspended.

Conviction Follows Appeal

His conviction one week ago followed his appeal from the prior conviction.

Judge Woodward told Dr. Morris yesterday, "I do not believe you told the truth when you said you heard nothing" at the time of the accident.

Testimony brought out during the trial that a piece of metal found in a field near the accident was from Dr. Morris' rear bumper, according to FBI analysis.

Character witnesses for Dr. Morris yesterday were Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer; Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of schools; Dr. Dexter Bullard, director of Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium; Richard Green, Hockville banker; Juvenile Court Judge Alfred D. Noyes, who also was one of the psychiatrist's defense counsel, and Dr. William Welsh, Rockville physician.

After sentence was pronounced, Dr. Morris asked his attorneys if it were possible that the sentence be suspended. After a conference with Judge Woodward, defense attorney F. Barnard Welsh told Dr. Morris the judge said he had "worried over the decision for four days and would not change his mind."

Jail Sentence Suspended in Connelly Case

The six-months jail sentence against Frank P. Connelly, 23, of Rockville, for assaulting an officer, has been suspended in Montgomery County Circuit Court. He was fined $100 on the same charge.

Connelly was convicted of assaulting State Trooper J. D. Kavanagh in Rockville Jail after being arrested on a drunk-driving charge November 27.

No Amount of Bus Trouble Could Keep 19 Boys From Completing Their Trip Here

The Washington Post

DETERMINED GROUP—Boys from the High "Y" Club of Mansfield, Ohio, had only a few hours sleep in three days when they started on their tour of the city yesterday, but they were full of life despite five breakdowns in a battered bus which was finally abandoned on a Pennsylvania mountain top. At the YMCA they check over a map with Robert Y. Davis, (seated, right) their adviser, ready to start bright and early for more sightseeing

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

A wayward bus known as "The Blue Streak" started out for Washington from Mansfield, Ohio, Sunday with 19 high school boys aboard.

What happened from that point proves that, whatever the schoolbooks say, Economy Does Not Pay.

Five breakdowns later the bus, rechristened now with all contempt and no affection "The Ruptured Rod," was abandoned high on a Pennsylvania mountain top.

Cruises at 23 MPH

The fact that the boys arrived here at 4 a. m. yesterday is a tribute to the determination of 19 lads who saved their money for two years to see the Capital sights and who would not be turned aside by any obstacles.

"The Blue Streak," vintage 1939, cruises at 23 miles an hour and with the pedal hard to the floorboard will do 28.

The bus had faithfully served the schoolchildren of Mansfield but had never, wisely it now appears, ventured more than a few miles from that city.

In a word, a rich man would never choose it as the vehicle for traveling 452 miles in a stretch.

Zips to Wooster

Departing Sunday night, the bus choked along with some courage clear to Wooster, Ohio, 35 miles away.

There a generator flew apart.

It was midnight and after some searching the boys got a dealer out of bed and bought a new one. Cost: $14.50.

Rejuvenated, the Streak literally flew 45 miles more, to the vicinity of Minerva, Ohio, where it was stricken with a hot rod.

While most of the boys slept on the floor in the house of a Samaritan farmer who took them in, one accompanied by a leader hitchhiked four miles into town for a wrecker. Tow fee: $7. Repair bill: $23.

302 Miles to Go

By noon Monday, she was 150 miles out of East Liverpool and a mere 302 from the Nation's Capital when the generator bought at Wooster expired. The boys found a second-hand one for $11.49.

Three hours later in the hills of West Virginia, the Streak suddenly stopped.

Early yesterday morning she crept up the steep slopes of Summit Mountain out of Uniontown, Pa., only 202 miles from the finish line.

Just as she approached the peak she stopped dead, with two connecting rods suddenly cast asunder.

The Blue Streak had had it, Robert Y. Davis, a Mansfield teacher in charge of the boys, decided.

She was left in charge of two other leaders. A commercial bus was called in. The boys climbed aboard for Washington. Arriving at 4 a. m., they slept two hours.

Made the Rounds

Then in their first day here they visited the House Office Building, the Senate, Supreme Court, Ford's Theater and FBI.

They had had about 6 hours sleep in 48, but the YMCA, where they're staying, resounded with their energy.

They're planning to start back Friday. At this writing it is uncertain whether The Blue Streak, pardon us, the Ruptured Rod, will get here to take them back to Mansfield.

Trained Killer Is Suspected In Slayings at Lansburgh's

Were the Good Friday murders at the Lansburgh department store the work of a trained killer?

One detective offered this theory yesterday as police pressed their hunt for the slayer of two night watchmen in the downtown store.

The knife thrusts that ended the lives of the two elderly watchmen were not the slashing blows an amateur might inflict, the detective said.

They were deep, quick, expert—each to a vital spot—the type of knife skill taught during the war to certain troops whose assignment was to swoop silently on enemy positions, kill swiftly by the knife, and withdraw.

One watchman, Oliver R. Hess, 56, of 1324 Massachusetts ave. nw., was stabbed three times in the back, twice in the chest. The second victim, John C. Carpenter, 66, of 506 G st. sw., was knifed three times in the chest, once in the back.

The autopsy showed this: any one of the blows with the eight-inch butcher's boning knife could have caused death—and—each one went a full eight inches into the bodies of the victims.

Meanwhile, police continued to question and requestion employes and former employes of Lansburgh's—the routine sort of investigation that is drab because of its monotony, but is so often productive of results.

More than 30 detectives, working under Lieut. Richard Felber, acting head of the homicide squad, worked their way through the long list of Lansburgh workers past and present. Those upon whom even the slightest suspicion could fall were fingerprinted and subjected to chemical tests that bring out blood stains even if they have been washed off.

Since the murders, police have questioned between 350 and 400 persons but Felber says:

"We haven't had a definite suspect in this case yet."

All leave for detectives at headquarters has been canceled for the present. They are kept busy investigating numerous tips that are phoned to headquarters.

Brief memorial services for the two watchmen will be held on the main floor of Lansburgh's at 11 a. m. today. The Rev. Seth Brooks of the Universalist Church will conduct the services.

Funeral services for Carpenter will be at 2 p. m. today at the home of his brother, William, at 491 H st. sw. Burial will be in Washington National Cemetery. The body of Hess was sent to his home in Baltimore for services.

Secretary Gray Reviews Troops On His Last Day

Gordon Gray marked his last full day as Secretary of the Army by reviewing troops at Fort McNair yesterday.

High-ranking Army Officers stood beside the retiring Secretary as he reviewed troops of the Third Infantry, the combat engineers from Fort Belvoir, and tank teams of the Third Cavalry from Fort Meade.

Afterward Gray was guest of honor at a reception in the officer's club at Ft. McNair.

Also present was Frank Pace, jr., who will be sworn in today at 11 a. m. as Gray's successor in the office of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Bridge Traffic Slowed by Truck Mishap

An Army tractor-trailer truck loaded with food for Fort McNair slowed down Highway Bridge traffic for an hour yesterday when it jacknifed near Jefferson Memorial about 2 p. m.

The bridge approaches, which were reduced from two roads to one Monday, were cut from four lanes to two until an Army wrecker removed the truck.

Motor transport personnel at the fort said they understood a safety latch pin had snapped and the trailer slid back onto the tractor's wheels as the northbound truck made the turn off the bridge. No one was injured.

Long Island Man Hurt in Md. Crash

Joseph Evers, 51, of Long Island, N. Y., was injured seriously about 2:30 a. m. yesterday when his car left the Baltimore blvd. at Beltsville, Md., and struck a utility pole.

He was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, and given treatment for a crushed chest. Later he was removed to Walter Reed Hospital, where he is a patient.

Child, 3, Hurt in Fall From Auto's Back Seat

Deborah Franklin, 3, 3075 N. Pollard st., Arlington, was taken to Arlington Hospital yesterday with a skull fracture sustained in a fall from the back seat of an automobile.

She was riding with another child in the back seat of the car driven by her mother, Mrs. James D. Franklin.

County Plans Sheriff Case Probe as He Is Sentenced

U. S. Data Requested On Gambling; Former Official Gets Term For Tax Evasion

An investigation by the Prince Georges County grand jury into the case of R. Earle Sheriff was set in motion yesterday, several hours after Sheriff was sentenced for Federal income tax evasion.

Sheriff, who admitted taking $22,000 "protection" money from gamblers while sheriff of Prince Georges County from 1943 through 1946, was sentenced to a year and a day and fined $1000 at Baltimore.

Later, A. Gwynn Bowie, Prince Georges State's attorney, announced he sent telegrams to the Department of Justice and the Bureau of Internal Revenue requesting they make available to the county grand jury their files and records in the Sheriff tax case.

He also requested that the agents who worked on the case appear before the grand jury to testify. The telegrams were sent to Assistant Attorney General Theron Lamar Caudle, who heads the Justice Department's tax division, and Commissioner of Internal Revenue George J. Schoeneman.

Comment Withheld

The Justice Department withheld comment on the request. A spokesman said Caudle was out of town and not expected back at his desk until today.

Bowie said if the information and testimony was forthcoming, it would immediately be laid before the grand jury.

In pleading guilty to the tax evasion charge last week, Sheriff admitted accepting $22,000 from gamblers from 1943 through 1946. However, he insisted he was not in a position to furnish them protection during his term as sheriff.

He also denied that he knew the identity of the gamblers who made the payments. The cash, he said, was delivered to him by "runners."

Yesterday, in Baltimore Federal Court, Sheriff made this brief statement before he was sentenced:

"Your honor, I think that Mr. McCullough (Robert W. McCullough, defense counsel) covered the case very thoroughly. I ask mercy of the court."

But Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut declared this was an "unusual" case. He disagreed with the probation department's finding it was "a normal kind of tax case, as far as the public interest is concerned."

Not Ordinary Police Officer

"The defendant," the judge declared, "was not an ordinary police officer, but a high official of the county, one upon whom the court relied to execute its decrees. He really was a part of the judicial administration of justice."

Chesnut suggested the State of Maryland or Prince Georges County authorities might be interested in investigating further the payments made by gamblers to Sheriff.

Chestnut said he received a large number of letters from friends of Sheriff attesting to his good character. He said another letter writer questioned how Sheriff could expect clemency when he had not disclosed the identity of the gamblers who paid him money.

Sheriff was taken into custody immediately as a Federal prisoner.

Pays $10,430 in Back Taxes

The Government charged Sheriff with reporting only $8463 of his $44,962 income from 1943 through 1948. He paid $10,430 in back taxes Monday, but still owes almost $10,000 more in penalties and interest.

Sheriff was appointed chief deputy sheriff of Prince Georges County in December, 1938, and was elected sheriff four years later, taking office in January, 1943. Under law he could not succeed himself, so he was again appointed deputy when his term expired at the end of 1946. He resigned as deputy last March 7, a few hours before his indictment.

Sheriff is 55, lives at Landover, Md., and is the father of two children.

Home Rule Plan Could Face Ban

Reveres' Hopes Leaner; Ride May Be a Misdemeanor

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Listen my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere,
On the eighteenth of April, in Seventy-five;
Hardly a man is now alive
—H. W. Longfellow.

ALL THE Central Suffrage Conference wants is permission from the District Commissioners to ride like Paul Revere down F st. come next Tuesday—the eighteenth of April, as in the poem—to proclaim the merits of home rule.

There'd be a man on a horse like Paul Revere. There'd be a sign on the horse: "Taxation Without Representation Is Still Tyranny!"

And along the line of march, there'd be "Paula Reveres," minute-women—if you so please—provided by the League of Women Voters.

Distribute Literature.

The "Paula Reveres," wrote Central Suffrage's President Culver B. Chamberlain, would distribute suffrage literature and "Votes for D. C." buttons, and accept contributions.

"We can assure you," Chamberlain's letter to the Commissioners asserted," our plans can be carried out with order and dignity.'

THE Commissioners asked Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, for a recommendation. Very frankly Barrett "would like to recommend disapproval . . . generally." He made a report to the Commissioners yesterday saying so.

Take that horse, now. There's no law against a horse riding down F st., said Barrett. On the other hand, "it would create a problem with other vehicular traffic."

And beneath from the pebbles, in passing, a spark.

And the sign: "The carrying of a placard on a horse is in violation of the sign regulations of the District of Columbia, which provide: '. . . that no advertising sign or banner shall be carried or transported on or over any public space.' "

ON the other hand again, said Barrett, "the sign regulations also provide that 'a permit not conforming with these regulations may be issued if, in the opinion of the Commissioners, such signs shall aid in the promotion of an activity of an exclusively civic nature. . . .' "

Hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch
Of the North Church as a signal light—
One, if by land, and two, if by sea;
And I on the opposite shore will be.

Now as for contributions, Barrett reported, absolutely no—unless. "The collection of contributions on the streets would be in violation of the regulations unless the commissioners expressly grant the Committee (sic) that privilege."

And the literature? "Distribution of the literature on the streets is not in violation of the police regulations.'

May Litter Streets

"IT IS not within the jurisdiction of the police department to recommend disapproval of that phase of the demonstration," writes Barrett. "But we can expect if literature is distributed, that persons receiving it may—and probably will—drop it on the streets, in violation of Section 1, Article 3, of the police regulations."

And in the meeting house windows, blank and bare,
As if they already stood aghast

FURTHERMORE, the Barrett letter says, "the subject of home rule is controversial and opposing groups may request special privileges for demonstrations.'

"I would like to recommend disapproval of this demonstration generally," Barrett concludes, "but it is recommended that the attitude of the corporation counsel be ascertained as to what may properly be permitted for this demonstration."

Goes to Counsel

THE Barrett letter, together with Chamberlain's request, have been forwarded to Corporation Counsel's office.

A member of the Suffrage Conference said, however, that any appreciably delay in a finding from the Corporation Counsel can set the whole ride back.

And as Longfellow says:

Booted and spurred, with a heavy stride,
On the opposite shore walked Paul Revere . . .
The belfry tower of Old North Church.

Public Airing Slated Today On Budget

A public hearing on the proposed Prince Georges County budget which would provide for a $2.24 tax rate as against the present $1.97 per $100 rate will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

Expenditures of $4,933,008 are provided in the budget proposals, including $2,412,000 for county schools. The County Memorial Library is urging more money and almost $20,000 additional is being asked for the Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly.

Representatives of the League of Women Voters, the county Federation of Civic Associations, the Memorial Library, the Council of Parents and Teachers and individual civic and business associations are expected to be on hand to urge retention or reduction of budget items as proposed.

The commissioners, who yesterday held a closed session on the budget, are known to be anxious to at least maintain the present tax rate and this may be possible with paring of the budget estimates and the revenue from an additional 23 million dollars in assessable base placed on the county books this past year. It is not expected that the levy will be signed before next week.

The commissioners yesterday ordered that refunds be made to members of the county police force of money they have paid into the county police retirement fund. The county police have been placed under the State retirement system. Some of the policemen will receive as much as $600 in refunds. The total to be refunded will amount to approximately $21,000.

Edgar A. Merkle, chairman of the advisory committee to the commissioners, reported that the State Roads Commission has offered to take over designing of Rhode Island ave. from Hyattsville to Beltsville; Colesville rd. from Queens Chapel rd. to University la., and River rd. from Bladensburg to Kenilworth.

The Montgomery County Council yesterday named a 16-member Citizens Advisory Committee on Housing to recommend appointees to the County Housing Authority.

In addition, the committee would act in an advisory capacity to the authority, study substandard housing conditions and determine the need for continuing veterans' housing projects.

Members of the housing authority at present, all of whose terms have expired, are E. Brooke Lee, Douglas Diamond, Jo V. Morgan, Joseph Buscher and O. W. Anderson.

Appointed temporary chairman of the advisory committee was Philip Schiff of Chevy Chase, chairman of the housing committee of the Community Chest and Council.

Other members are Ralph McCabe, John Pratt and George Hawkins of Chevy Chase; Leonard D. Haley, the Rev. John McClelland, Joseph Buscher, Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald, the Rev. Philip Edwards and Sam Eig of Silver Spring; Mrs. Esther Sherman and Mrs. Parlett Moore of Rockville; John Williamson of Bethesda; Dr. Philip Irey of Spencerville; Mrs. Hattie May Burgess of Brookmont, and Robert Miller of Sandy Spring.

At yesterday's meeting, the Council also received the recommendation of the Fairway Hills Civic Association's executive committee for the appointment of Milton A. Smith of 6643 Barr rd., Fairway Hills, to the vacant Council seat caused by the recent resignation of Dr. Lewis Merriam.

In other business, the Council forwarded three names to Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., for consideration for apointment as director of civil defense for the County. These were Robert W. Beall, Bethesda attorney; Colonel Ernest Kindervater, U.S.A. ret., of Ashton, and Edward L. Foster, Silver Spring attorney.

A warning was also issued to operators of tourist homes in residential-A zones, that they will be prosecuted after July 1 unless they have applied for rezoning by that time.

Prince Georges Bars 12-Month School Plan

Proposed 12-month use of the county schools was rejected yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education at its meeting in Upper Marlboro, Md.

Use of county schools for the full year had been proposed by the county Federation of Civic Associations as a possible economy measure and also to aid overcrowded schools. The children would not go 12 months of the year but would have their usual nine months' schooling in rotated periods.

The board, upon advice of the staff, decided that the plan actually would cost more money than the present system and would create too much confusion in the school program. It contended students coming into the county or leaving for other systems would be unable to pick up classes, the schools are not constructed for summer classes and would upset family life and vacation plans. The board pointed out that places which had tried the plan, such as Newark, N. J.; Houston, Tex., and several towns in Pennsylvania, all had abandoned the 12-month plan after a trial.

The board announced April 20 and 21 from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. at the elementary schools as registration days for children who will begin the first grade next year. Children must be 6 years old by January 1, 1951, have birth certificates, vaccination and diphtheria immunization certificates.

The board opened 11 bids on the proposed Brandywine Elementary School addition of 10 rooms, which also includes renovation of four existing rooms and provision of a multipurpose room. Low bidder, with an offer of $314,528, was the Blake Construction Co. of Washington. The board deferred action until the next meeting May 2, a week earlier than the usual meeting time. The bids were considerably higher than estimates.

Final plans for the four-room and multipurpose room addition for Bradbury Heights Elementary School were approved. Bids will be opened May 2 at 2 p. m (EST).

Preliminary plans for multipurpose rooms at Lanham, Camp Springs, Wildercroft Elementary Schools and four-room additions at Cheverly and Wildercroft Elementary Schools were approved.

Hollywood Pays Tribute To Huston

Spencer Tracy led the 650 mourners at memorial services in two minutes of silence—a tribute participated in simultaneously by all movie studios. It was an unprecedented honor in the movie colony.

Mr. Huston died last Friday of a heart attack, a day after his 66th birthday.

"Professionally, he was easy to rate. . . . He was the best. . . . He filled in with 45 years of the best playing you'll ever see. It was the works—singing, dancing, Shakespeare—call your shot, Huston could do it."

In the audience were such screen stars as Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Edward G. Robinson, James Cagney, Ronald Colman, Billie Burke, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Jimmy Durante and Brian Ahern.

This is her first hour in Israel!

And in that hour, the sorrow and misery, the hunger and fear, of her long flight are momentarily forgotten . . . banished by the joy of the miracle that brought her here . . . a miracle that is really many miracles in one.

It's a miracle that Israel is reborn . . . a miracle that the Jews held off the Arabs . . . a miracle that 250,000 Jews were brought to Israel in 1949.

But these miracles didn't just happen! A world of suffering and toil, of blood and sweat went into their making.

And even then, no miracles could have been wrought if you hadn't worked valiantly and given generously!

Thousands . . . yes, tens of thousands of people still stand before the gates of Israel, pleading to be let in. For them, homes must be built. Clothes must be made . . . tools must be fashioned . . . crops must be planted. Factories must be built, and hospitals must be started.

And you . . . you who have helped to bring about so many miracles, must buckle down and help some more . . . and still more.

The work is started, and prospers mightily. The goal is actually in sight. But it cannot be attained . . . indeed, all that has gone before can come to naught . . . if we fail to do what is expected of us now.

So work for Israel. Give for Israel. For was it not written: "Thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother, but thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him . . ."

Tobé Says...

Sailors Are On Level This Spring

Of course you know that I'm talking about sailor hats when I say that "sailors are on the level this spring" and I'm firmly resisting any temptation to make puns!

Of all the straight-on-the-head hat fashions, I think sailors are the most logical because after all that's the way they were originally worn. In Paris in February, I found that Mme. Paulette, one of the smartest milliners, was softening the rather prim look that comes with wearing sailors on the level by making the brims a little irregular—cutting them in wide scallops, or pinching up the brim here and there in a becoming little angle.

Girl, 26, After Dating Man Several Years, Positively Feels She Wouldn't Marry Him, Yet Seems Unable to Renounce His Company

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with John for nearly four years and am now 26. He is very much in love with me, but I have told him repeatedly that although I think a great deal of him, I am not in love with him and never will marry him.

Yet even if I would consent to marriage, he could not have financed it up to this time. He has no money at all; in fact, is in debt and will be for at least another year. But he says he will never stop trying to marry me, and as I enjoy his company we have continued to see each other twice a week, year after year.

We both have our faults, but he has always been wonderful to me and I know that I am definitely much harder to get along with than he. He is a very nice chap. I consider him the best friend I've ever had, and I would miss him a lot if we should break up,—that I know, for we've tried to break up several times, and always got back together again.

However, I am not a youngster and if I intend to marry at all, it should be within the next few years. And if I am not going to marry John, it would seem sensible to part with him. What is holding us? Do you think I should accept the situation as is, and enjoy the present on a transient basis, not worrying about the passage of time and not having any happy future anticipations either? Please advise.

C. K.

Afraid to Take Chances

DEAR C. K.: You and John have the same consolation value for each other that two persons would have if marooned together on a desert island, cut off from the main stream of human life. Or to put it another way, you cling to each other as to a life raft in an empty sea—venturing off for a hopeful swing at self-reliance now and then, but soon falling back on the same old prop.

You drifted into keeping company as an alternative to doing nothing socially, I suppose; and you stay together in essential frustration year after year, due to kindred neurotic passivity, I think. Each of you is inordinately dependent upon somebody to furnish pattern, purpose and significance to your days, which figuratively puts you in the same boat, comrades in a plight you try to gloss over by speaking as if the association developed by choice.

Neither of you faces life with courageous objectivity, nor searches inwardly for plain truths about himself. Your existence as individuals is sharply circumscribed by encompassing fears of failure in the fields of love, friendship and social venture of any sort—fears that press upon your conscious personality somewhat as darkness encircles a campfire struck for the night.

To combat these fears without facing or solving them, pretenses are formed and accepted as real about one's feelings, motives and actions. Take for example John, who cannot stand on his own feet or chart a productive course, as his perennial indebtedness shows, but who wishes to make believe that he is in all ways "average mature" for his age. How does he delude himself and others that he isn't in flight from adult commitments? He does it by "seriously" courting you, after realizing that you wouldn't consider marrying him.

Neurotic Enslavement

CONVERSELY, you stress fondness for his presence—although your soul says "Ugh" to his suit—in order to submerge the fact that you stick to him expediently, in fear of "worse case" if you send him away, or if he loses interest and departs.

In being a trial to him at times, you are ventilating resentment, I think, at being neurotically enslaved to a dating routine that gets nowhere and leaves you ever hungry for honest relatedness deeply felt and sincerely reciprocated.

You are up against total frustration here, and resignation to that is repudiation of life. Now is the day of salvation, Scripture says. Change never dawns on those who expect it to begin tomorrow. "As thou hast believed, so be it"—such is the secret of lack or abundance in one's experience. If you think you can't do better than John, you never will; but if you joyously anticipate real love, you'll find it.

Margaret Truman Here For Visit; Blair House Faces Busy Week

By Elizabeth Maguire

A SUN-TANNED Margaret Truman, back from Florida, is spending a week in Washington. The calendar at Blair House is filled with state occasions, but Margaret is devoting most of her time to seeing her own friends. Rumors that she will give a small dance this weekend were not confirmed by Mrs. James Meredith Helm, White House secretary, at a press conference held yesterday. But it is expected that she will give some form of entertainment before returning to her studies in New York on Sunday or Monday.

Miss Truman has not been in Washington since January 26, when she was maid of honor in the wedding of Miss Drucie Snyder and Maj. John Horton.

The state dinner to be given this evening by the President and Mrs. Truman in honor of the President of Chile and Senora de Gonzalez Videla at the Carlton will be attended by Margaret, but Mrs. Helm knows of no other official engagements on her calendar.

MARGARET TRUMAN

First Lady's Calendar Crowded

MEANWHILE, countless engagements fill the First Lady's post-Lenten schedule. Yesterday Mrs. Truman motored to Annapolis to a tea given in her honor by the Naval Academy Women's Club at the Naval Academy. Tomorrow she is attending the Cavlacade of Greek Fashions at the Mayflower, and today she will be the guest of honor at the Woman's National Democratic Club fashion luncheon to be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel.

This evening the President and Mrs. Truman will give a state dinner at the Carlton Hotel in honor of His Excellency Gabriel Gonzalez Videla, President of Chile, and Senora Rosa M. de Gonzalez Videla. Guests will number 68.

Wives of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be received by Mrs. Truman tomorrow at Blair House at 4 p. m., and at 5 p. m. Mrs. Truman will receive the delegates of the National Committee for the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth. There will be 100 in the first gathering and 80 in the second.

The annual luncheon of the Young Women's Christian Association will be attended by Mrs. Truman on Friday, April 14, at the Mayflower Hotel, and it is expected that the President and Mrs. Truman will attend the dinner to be given Friday evening by the President of Chile and Senora de Gonzalez Videla at the Shoreham.

Trumans to Attend Press Party

ON Saturday, April 15, the President and Mrs. Truman will be guests of honor at the annual dinner and stunt party to be given by the Women's National Press Club in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel. The following day at 5 p. m., Mrs. Truman will receive the six award women and the officers of the Women's National Press Club.

Mrs. Truman will entertain at a luncheon on Thursday, April 20, for members of the 74th Club. Guests will number 29.

Suzanne Walker's Portrait Is Unveiled

By Marie McNair

MRS. HAROLD WALKER and her family have no match for charm. Yesterday at her tea to show the portrait of her granddaughter, Suzanne Walker, the three generations were gathered together for but a fleeting moment. And 14-year-old Suzanne had all the poise of her grandmother and her "aunt Evie" Robert, plus a youthful and appealing shyness.

Polish born Stanislav Rembski, the artist, was there yesterday with Mrs. Rembski, to receive the plaudits of the guests. He has painted pretty Suzanne with bare shoulders and a soft cherry-colored frock. And just so you couldn't be quite sure whether you were looking at the portrait or the subject Suzanne wore the same dress to greet her grandmother's friends.

Mrs. Walker wore black; Evie Robert, just back from Florida and becomingly suntanned, was in black too, and if I'm not too wrong, so was Rahel Davies Fitch, Suzanne's mother. Other members of the Walker clan on hand were Aldace, who is Suzanne's father, and Baroness von Schoen, sister of the hostess.

The door was open to the terrace at Friendship, Mrs. Walker's central unit of the late Mrs. McLean's Georgetown house. A few guests had gathered there in the sunlight until the breezes blew too strong, but Clarence Howes and Merritt Swift ventured down the gravel walk together to inspect the housing development below.

Guest Line Like Fashion Parade

There was Mme. Prochnik in violet wool with a matching hat. Mrs. Morris Cafritz' print frock was cafe au lait shade with a black spider web design and her hat of the same pale brown was fashioned of melon shaped segments of felt. Mrs. Millard Tydings' blond hair was topped with a geranium colored straw hat piled with cabbage roses in a deeper shade. Senora de Berckemeyer, there with her husband, the Peruvian Ambassador, wore a toast and black print, and others were Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General; Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Sidney Graves and Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies.

Mrs. McCeney Werlich brought along her cousin, a Mrs. Bradley, visiting her from Boston. Wolcott Waggaman—Doggie to his friends—told me he's busy with architect plans converting the David Lawrence house from Spanish to French, for the new Swedish Embassy.

I chatted with Rafal Lepkowski and Mrs. Emery Smith, and caught a glimpse of Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Sidney Graves, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Kurt Hetzel and Mrs. Robert Waggaman.

Pakistan Envoy Host at Dinner

The British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, was a guest, and the company also included Senator and Mrs. Elbert Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Michael McDermott, Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Collins, Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Lay, jr., Mrs. Paul Alling, Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Edson.

At Maj. and Mrs. D. Wesley Kells' party on Saturday little Carol Ann Davidson and Joyce Ann Plunkett, dressed as Easter bunnies, received donations from the guests to help endow the Signal Corps room in the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club. Major Kells is a member of the Royal Canadian Signals.

Among those who attended were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Spencer B. Akin, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William O. Reeder, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Kirke B. Lawton, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Wesley L. Guest and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alfred M. Shearer.

Capt. Douglas Victor Gladding, USN, has orders to be professor of naval science at Harvard University, and he and Mrs. Gladding are giving up their house in Washington on May 3. They will live on board their boat at Annapolis for three weeks before going to their new home in Cambridge, Mass. Among many farewell parties for Mrs. Gladding is a luncheon today to be given by Mrs. Thurber Cushing at her home.

The Columbia Hospital gift shop, operated for the benefit of the hospital, will have its official opening Friday at 10 a. m. and will be open every day from 10 to 4. Mrs. Robert W. Fleming and Mrs. Robert Blackistone are the two ladies in charge and they'll appoint a series of shop managers.

Mumblety-Peg? First Lady Was Once an Expert

At the game of mumblety-peg, the First Lady used to be a winner. She grew up in Independence, Mo., with three brothers and had lots of practice. Mrs. James Meredith Helm told reporters at a White House press conference yesterday that a radio story about Mrs. Truman's skill in the game was doubtless true. "But there's no sign she has kept it up," she added.

As a girl she probably more than once pulled the knife out of the ground with her teeth. "It's the esoteric right of the player to do so," explained Mrs. Helm, who was a mumblety-peg fan herself at one time.

PARRY-PHRASING

Another Gen. Vaughan Comes to Washington

By Ellen Buell Parry

ANOTHER General and Mrs. Vaughan are in Washington. This one is Brig. Gen. W. W. Vaughan, a medical general (retired) who lives on Long Island, is in the Capital for a visit.

The visiting Vaughans have a daughter and son-in-law here—Harriet and Wilson Prichett, who recently moved to Downscrest, near Chain Bridge, from Philadelphia.

BRIG. GEN. W. W. VAUGHAN

I asked General Vaughan if he was ever confused with another General Vaughan.

"I think, when Mrs. Vaughan and I were in Europe last year, it was thought at times that I had a White House connection. In Paris they wanted to decorate me. I said, 'I'm not Harry Vaughan'."

The Vaughans have lived many years in Washington—he was connected with Walter Reed—and have numerous friends here. Colonel and Mrs. Hugh Drum (Trapper and Betty) had a few of the Vaughans' friends in for cocktails yesterday, at their home on Rodman st.

WASHINGTON friends of Malcolm Ross, returning from Miami, report that his new book, to be called, "The Man Who Lived Backward," is completed and will soon be ready for publication. The book is expected to tell a lot about the Fair Employment Practice Committee of which Mike Ross was chairman during its wartime tenure and should interest both the pro and con forces on Capitol Hill.

Mike is at present assistant to the president of the University of Miami, although he still owns his Virginia home, near Vienna, where he and his family lived for many years while he was with the Government here in Washington.

CLARK CLIFFORD, who recently resigned as Special Counsel to President Truman to resume the practice of law, was asked this week if he had made a million dollars yet.

"Not quite," replied Clifford. "I've had a couple of $10 cases and some small ones."

FAITH BALDWIN was in town recently. She's written 65 novels. She said she's followed the advice Sinclair Lewis once gave, "If you can't stun them with quality, stun them with quantity."

Her advice to young writers: "Slant your stories for 35 years or under. Young love sells like crazy . . . next most popular is writing about young marital problems." Faith Baldwin continued, "People raising children from 14 to 26 years have so much young love around the house, why they want to read about it is more than I know, but they do."

NO ONE fainted when popular Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo preached at the noon service at Epiphany Episcopal Church recently. But a few years ago when Dr. Sizoo was there, and a thousand late-comers were turned away, one woman refused to leave when told there was no more seats in the crowded church.

"Someone is bound to faint," insisted the woman, standing her ground in the vestibule. "I shall wait."

A few minutes later, someone inside did faint. The triumphant prophet stalked in, even as the sick woman was being carried out.

April Bride

MRS. JACK R. SALAMANCA
. . . actress is married

Miss Mimi Louise Norton and Jack Richard Salamanca were married last evening at the Petworth Baptist Church.

Both the bride and her husband have acted at the Olney (Md.) Theater, at the Dublin Gate Theater, and in Broadway shows. They will sail Saturday for three years in Paris.

Mrs. Salamanca is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Grant Norton of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lucy Salamanca of New York City and Dr. Raul Salamanca of Bogota, Colombia.

Both the newlyweds studied at George Washington University and the Catholic University Drama Department.

Here's Mrs. Pollock's Famous Recipe for Delicious Sweet Rolls

Dissolve in 1 cup scalded milk
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup Franklin Granulated Sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Cool and add 1 cake compressed or 1 package granulated yeast dissolved in ¼ cup lukewarm water
2 eggs, well beaten
6 cups sifted all-purpose flour

Knead dough on lightly floured board until smooth. Shape into ball. Place in greased bowl, cover, let rise until double in bulk. Punch down, knead again. Roll ½" thick on lightly floured board. Spread liberally with butter, brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll jelly-roll fashion.

Cut in ¾" slices; place (cut side down) in greased baking pan. Cover, let rise until double in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 400°F., about 20 minutes. While cake is still hot, frost top with Franklin Confectioners' Sugar icing. Makes about 2 dozen rolls. This is the famous recipe always used by Mrs. Donald Pollock of Canton, Ohio, for the delicious sweet rolls she serves. Most important part of the recipe, says Mrs. Pollock, is to use Franklin Pure Cane Sugar, which always gives you:

Franklin's "Famous Five" Advantages

1. 100% Pure Sugar Cane Sugar
2. Extra-Fine Granulated
3. Fast-Dissolving
4. Free-Mixing
5. Enriches Food Flavors

Anne Advises Spring Housecleaners About Washing and Storing Blankets, And Making Plastic Slipcovers

DEAR ANNE:
Spring is here, and I'm beginning to think about packing away blankets. Do you advise washing them or having them drycleaned? If washing is your answer, how should I go about it?
T. G., Vienna, Va.

Not all woolen blankets can be washed successfully, T. G., so it is wisest to follow the manufacturer's advice as to whether the blanket is washable or not. Check tags carefully. If they do not give a clue, talk to the blanket department of the store where it was purchased.

Be careful with those you do wash. Choose a warm, breezy day. Wash quickly. Rinse quickly. Dry properly. Get someone to help you if you do attempt the job. You can use a plumber's suction plunger to wash and rinse blankets by lifting them up and down through the water.

First, sponge or brush the soiled bindings with heavy mild suds made with tepid water. Wash one blanket at a time. Fill the washer with tepid water (100 degrees). Use a mild soap or synthetic detergent. Wash quickly, not over three mintes in machine, with gentle action. If blanket is very soiled wash it again in clean suds. Support blanket with the bands when lifting from the water.

Squeeze the water out gently with wringer rolls very loosely set or spin dry. Rinse in water the same temperature as wash water. Rinse quickly, not over three minutes. Do not twist or treat roughly. Extract water again.

Dry blanket over double line with the ends or bindings down. Stretch carefully to even up edges. If hung outside, hang in the shade—or away from direct heat if hung inside. Turn blanket to other side when partly dry. When dry, brush lengthwise with fairly stiff whiskbroom. Press binding only with a steam iron or dry iron turned to rayon setting.

And wait until you try it, folks,

It IS good, Petunia! Mix 2/3 cup of brown sugar, 2-T of butter and 1-T of cream or evaporated milk, and spread it on the gingerbread while it's still faintly warm.

Bishop-Bracken

DEAR ANNE:
I am planning to make some draperies and slip covers out of plastic material. Is there any special way to sew these to avoid making holes in the plastic, etc.?
T. Y. D., Bethesda, Md.

These synthetic fabrics need to be handled lightly. Use no pins, basting, or tacks. Hang length of plastic over door and smooth out gently with hands before laying out and cutting. If any part become soiled, wipe off with damp cloth. Do not press or iron.

Plastics are easily stitched on the sewing machine and the use of attachments is perfectly satisfactory. Use fine needle (size 11), mercerized thread, light tension and light pressure.

Another group that has written to say it welcomes used clothing, shoes, sheets, towels, and soap for overseas shipment is Quaker Clothing Relief, 2111 Florida ave. Deliver them at the Decatur st. entrance.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me how to remove a blue embroidery transfer on a pillowcase? I do not wish to embroider it, but letting it stand overnight in a solution of chlorine bleach hasn't faded it at all. Would sodium perborate be more effective, and if so how strong a solution should I use? E. H., Washington.

DEAR E. H.: Sodium perborate is a milder bleach than chlorine, so I advise you to stick with the latter if the material is cotton. To bleach out the transfer marks, you should use at least 2 tablespoons of this bleach to 1 quart of water. Mix thoroughly and let the pillowcases stand in the solution 15 or 20 minutes. Then wash well in soapy water and rinse three times. The strong bleach should take out the marks, but if it doesn't, repeat treatment.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Personnel Man

A most important post in which . . . A person should excel . . . Is that of looking over and . . . Selecting personnel . . . It takes a lot of study and . . . Some expert judgment, too . . . To choose the applicants who will . . . Be competent and true . . . He may be called director or . . . The manager or such . . . But no amount of title should . . . Affect him very much . . . For his responsibility . . . Must answer every need . . . And he must bear at least a part . . . of any wrongful deed . . . And so the task he has to do . . . Is not exactly fun . . . But he must really get results . . . Before his job is done.

Cole Retired; Conroy May Get Fire Post

District Commissioners yesterday retired Fire Department Battalion Chief Gilbert A. Cole for physical disability, and were asked to promote Capt. Joseph W. Conroy to fill the vacancy.

Both actions had been expected. Cole has been on sick leave for several months, and his Fifth Battalion command was taken over by Battalion Chief Fred Litteral in a reshuffling of top officials last month.

Conroy

Cole

At that time Chief Engineer Joseph A. Mayhew also stated he would recommend Conroy, the department's senior captain, for promotion to the next battalion chief vacancy.

Conroy figured in a department squabble three years ago by charging the then Chief Clement Murphy with demoralizing the department. Recommendation for his promotion went to the District Building late yesterday and has not been acted on.

Cole is 50 and has served in the department for 29 years. A battalion chief for three years, he has commanded the Second and Seventh Battalions in addition to the Fifth.

He will be retired May 1 on half pay because of fainting spells which physicians diagnosed as bilateral carotid sinus syndrome.

Lawyers Drop Dodson Case Appeal Plan

Attorneys for Francis E. Dodson, former Arlington County policeman convicted last month of housebreaking with intent to commit rape and robbery, have changed their minds about appealing the case.

Defense attorneys John Paul Jones and Frank L. Ball noted an appeal in March, following conviction of the 31-year-old Dodson. However, Jones said yesterday the appeal will be formally withdrawn in Arlington Circuit Court today. He gave no reason.

Dodson, who broke into the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Jack Bartels at 2810-B S. 16th rd., Arlington last September, was sentenced to 12 years in prison on recommendation of a 12-man jury, which deliberated almost four hours.

Alexandria Nurses Back Mrs. Roszel

Alexandria Hospital's graduate nursing staff has rallied to the support of Mrs. Irene M. Roszel, who is slated to be replaced June 1 after serving the hospital 24 years, the last 13 as director of nurses.

In a letter addressed to the hospital directors and three allied organizations, the staff voiced its "respect and confidence" in Mrs. Roszel, it was learned yesterday.

Copies of the letter have been sent to the directors, the Board of Lady Managers, the hospital's nursing school committee and the hospital medical staff, a spokesman for the nurses said. The communication bears the indorsement of "about 99 percent" of the nursing staff.

The Board of Lady Managers is scheduled to meet April 20, while the directors will convene on April 24. The letter is slated for discussion at both meetings.

Hospital officials, in confirming a report last week that Mrs. Roszel would not be appointed as director of nurses, declined to give any reason for the action, which they termed "an administrative matter." Mrs. Roszel also has remained silent on her ouster.

Informed of the nursing staff's letter yesterday, Hospital Administrator Van C. Adams declined comment. He said he did not intend to "become involved in a newspaper discussion of the case."

Bar Group Elects 7 Nominators

Seven men were elected to the committee on nominations of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia last night at a meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

They are Leo A. Rover, Cecil Heflin, Milton King, John H. Burnett, Edmund D. Campbell, Herbert M. Bingham, and J. Harry Welch.

The association voted to continue for a year the office of executive secretary, a $7500 job created nine months ago. Expected opposition failed to materialize.

Charles Collier Chosen Head of Masonic Unit

Evangelist Chapter, Knights Rose Croix, one of the four coordinate bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry for the Valley of Washington, last night elected officers at a meeting in the Temple, 2800 16th st. nw.

Others elected were Evan Jones, senior warden; Otto G. Elble, junior warden; George Link, orator; R. Baker Harris, master of ceremonies; Thomas H. Dyer, expert; L. Malcolm Graham, assistant expert, and Orville E. Megby, standard bearer.

Reelected were Dr. John C. Palmer, chaplain and almoner; Austin J. Leister, secretary; Raymond N. Babcock, treasurer; Roy L. James, trustee, and William F. Holmes, tiler.

500 ACRES, located in the zone of 6 new gateways into Washington. The New South Capitol St. Gateway, the most important gateway to Washington in many years. This ground is located 4 blocks over the District line in 5 gateways. Baltimore Blvd. is coming down in this section. A new bridge is proposed in this neighborhood from Alex. The East Capitol St. Bridge is going to be built right away in this neighborhood, and we also have in operation the Penn. Ave. Bridge—and the Anacostia Bridge. This South Capitol St. Bridge is now operating with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. This bridge brings this 500 acres within about 12 minutes of the White House. Ground in similar locations located in the Virginia end of the bridges across the Potomac is worth around a million dollars an acre, that is in the shopping centers. Why wouldn't this land where we have 6 gateways in the business centers be worth a million dollars an acre some day? If you are a subdivider you can make a fortune developing this land. Who would have ever thought, speaking of real estate values, even 50 years ago that land where the Briggs National Bank is located is worth at the rate of 20 million dollars an acre? Fulton R. Francis: Beginning the Adventures of the Talking Mule

By David Stern

The night was black. The Burma hills were rugged.

When I realized I was alone, behind the enemy lines, I was worried. Who wouldn't be?

I started to think what the CO would say when I told him I'd lost my platoon.

Then I was downright scared.

I crept under the low branches of a banyan tree and tried to compose myself. I was exhausted. I suppose I must have fallen asleep.

Our dawn barrage waked me. The nearest explosions were a thousand yards below where the mountain slope leveled off into the valley. I knew I must cross that area to reach our lines.

I'd half risen to make a run for it, when I heard the whine of a shell. I dove, rolled over three times and came to a stop sitting up.

I was at the bottom of a slight ravine surrounded by low banyan trees.

Standing a few feet from me was a runt of an Army mule, as sad a creature as ever hauled a load away. His head hung low and his back hung lower.

I began feeling myself all over to discover if I was injured. When I came to my posterior I winced. Nothing serious, but tender.

"Isn't this one hell of a mess?" I must have spoken aloud.

"You said a mouthful," said a voice.

I leaped to my feet. Frantically I searched the ravine, following my gaze with the muzzle of my carbine.

"Who said that?" I demanded.

"I did." The voice was close.

"Right in front of you."

I could see nothing except the

"I can't see you," I said. "Come out or I'll shoot."

"I am out," said the voice. "And you better put up that gun before you hurt somebody."

The mule was looking at me with mournful brown eyes. Its lips were moving.

"Who's speaking?" I demanded.

"I am."

"Who is I?"

"Me . . . The mule."

"Don't be ridiculous," I said.

"Coming from a second lieutenant that's almost ironic," said the voice.

"Are you wired for sound?" I asked.

The mule cocked his head and rolled his eyes. "No. Are you?"

"I don't believe it," I said. I flatly refuse to believe it."

"Believe what?"

"That a mule can talk," I said.

"I'm not particularly interested in whether you believe it or not," said the mule. "Probably we'll both have our blocks knocked off before we get back. So what's the difference?"

"But . . . but it's fantastic!" I stammered.

"After all, you can talk," said the animal.

"I never heard anything like it," I said.

The mule indignantly pawed the earth with one hoof. "Undoubtedly there are a number of things about which you have never heard. That's why you're a junior officer."

I was annoyed. "Who are you?" I demanded.

"Just an Army mule . . . But my name happens to be Francis."

"Francis?" I said.

"That's right."

A shell landed nearby. Instinctively I cringed

"Getting close," said the mule.

"Much too close." I brushed some dirt from my arm. "Though you seem calm enough about it."

"I'm a fatalist," said the mule. "When a shell has your number on it, you're done for. In the meantime, no use worrying. Anyway, I've been hit once in this engagement. On the law of averages I shouldn't get it again."

"You're wounded?" I asked. It still seemed fantastic to be talking to a mule. But there wasn't anything else to do about it.

"Just a scratch." The animal shook his head. "I shouldn't have mentioned it."

"We are facing an extremely serious situation," I said. "We must decide upon a course of action."

The mule flapped its right ear forward. "Brilliant, lieutenant! Smack, dab, on the button, brilliant. Sounds just like Army Field Manual twenty-two-dash something or other. I presume you have studied a great many field manuals, lieutenant?"

"I have," I said.

"How ducky," said the mule. "Just what do you propose to do?"

"If you can talk," I said, "perhaps you have some other unusual qualifications?"

"Well," said Francis, "I can fly."

"Do you mean to say," I asked, "that you could just take off now, rise in the air, and fly back to our lines?"

"I could," said the mule. "But I wouldn't."

"You could but you wouldn't, what do you mean?"

"Look at the size of my rear." The mule waved his posterior delicately. "Wide as a barn door. I've reached the age when I'm beginning to spread, you know. Suppose I took off, have you any idea what my flying speed is?"

"No," I said, "I haven't."

"I'll tell you." The right ear was wiggling. "It's less than 25 miles an hour. Now imagine me sailing around out there in the open. Why, the Japs would fill me so full of 50-caliber slugs I'd look like lattice work."

"The Japs wouldn't know what you were," I suggested.

"So what?" Francis said. "The Japs never know what they're shooting at. Perhaps I had better make a run for it."

"Could you carry me?" I ventured.

"On my back?" Francis' voice rose.

"Yes," I said.

"Do you realize how much you would slow me up?"

"After all," I said, "I am an officer."

The mule rolled his eyes in a circle. "A second lieutenant."

"I am a commissioned officer," I repeated.

Suddenly an Army maxim flashed through my mind. "Always make a personal reconnaissance." I glanced at the lip of the ravine.

"Wait here," I said. "I'll take a look around."

Francis mumbled something that sounded like "Pull in your ears . . ." But I was already on my way.

I'd almost reached the top when I felt something hit the back of my right leg. Pain flamed up my back. I pitched over and rolled to the bottom.

The mule had cocked his head and was looking at me with an expression of thorough disgust. "Where'd it get you?"

"Oh," I moaned. "Oh! . . . In the leg. A piece of shrapnel . . . my side feels as if it's on fire."

"It isn't," said the mule. "Don't waste time telling me how much it hurts. Go to work. Put a tourniquet around your thigh."

"With what?"

"With what! With your belt. Didn't they ever teach you any first aid? Or weren't you listening?"

I unfastened my belt and drew it out. Fumbling badly, I worked it round my leg.

"Ouch," I said, clenching my teeth.

"Now pull it tight . . . Tighter. You've got to close the main artery . . . See, the blood's stopping."

Francis snorted. "This would have to happen. As though I weren't in enough trouble. Why don't they keep second lieutenants at home where they won't be in the road?"

"I didn't try to get hit," I said.

"By the tail of my great-aunt Regret who won the Derby*" Francis was growing more furious. "I ought to leave you here for Jap bait."

"Go ahead," I said. "Go ahead and save yourself. I'm done for."

"See here, lieutenant"—the mule was wagging that right ear—"you know perfectly well I can't leave you now. I'm an old-timer. I know the score. Esprit de corps. One for all and all for one. After a while it gets you. Like drink."

"What are you going to do?"

"What is there to do?" said the mule with a shrug. "Hoist you up on my back and take you to an aid station." The mule moved over. "Lean against me and pull yourself up."

"You said a second lieutenant wasn't worth saving."

We began to move. I was growing weaker. The last thing I remember saying was, "Francis, I'll have you made a corporal for this."

Tomorrow: Francis Creates a Problem.

7 Colleges Take Part

An Accolade to NBC For Books on Air

—By John Crosby—

RADIO has never been exactly noted for using its great coverage for any educational purposes much higher than a two-line joke about Betty Grable's legs. A shining exception is NBC Theater, which has presented the world's great books in dramatized form for the last two years.

The University of Louisville was the first to latch on to NBC Theater as one means of inserting great literature into the skulls of its students. Now seven colleges and universities use the program and give credits to students for listening.

Brooklyn College's handling is fairly typical. Students listen to the broadcasts, read the books, and submit five essays which are graded and returned. For a small fee, anyone can take the course at home and send in the papers.

Beyond the Blackboards

EMIL GREENBERG, supervisor of the Brooklyn College radio extension division, is an enthusiast not only for radio, but also for television and films, as educational aids. (A lot of educators mistrust any invention more advanced than a blackboard.)

Greenberg believes the dramatizations cast light on great books in many ways that reading doesn't. The F. Scott Fitzgerald story, "Babylon Revisited," one of the NBC Theater productions, "was exciting on the air," says Greenberg. "The mere presentation—the way the actors read their lines. I have never been able to explain the spirit of Fitzgerald as NBC Theater did."

However, he doesn't always see eye to eye with NBC on its dramatizations. He feels Theodore Dreiser's "Sister Carrie" didn't adhere to the spirit of the book because so much cutting had to be done. He would have preferred Sherwood Anderson's "Winesburg, Ohio," to his "Dark Laughter." Also, he is sorrowful that none of Willa Cather's books have been performed. (Miss Cather stipulated in her will that none of her work swas ever to be made available to radio.)

Blue With Erudition

THE choice of the books is made jointy by representatives of the seven colleges and NBC. Their powwow in New York on what books to dramatize develop into enormously learned arguments, and some meetings have been fairly acrimonious. A Dreiser man will tangle with a Galsworthy admirer and the air turns blue with erudition, much of it very witty.

Some books don't take to dramatization very readily, and NBC tries, not always with success, to tout the professors off these works. In other cases, radio rights to a book cannot be obtained. The final choice is up to NBC, but the network follows the professors' suggestions as closely as it can.

Among the books that have been or will be dramatized this year are Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed," Joseph Conrad's "Victory," Galsworthy's "The Patrician," Virginia Woolf's "Mrs. Dalloway," D. H. Lawrence's "Sons and Lovers," James Joyce's "Portraits of the Artist as a Young Man," Aldous Huxley's "After Many a Summer Dies the Swan," and Walter Van Tilburg Clark's "The Track of the Cat."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

You Might Call This a 'Breathless Item'

Most disillusioned woman in Washington is a neighbor of ours who thought she had found a big bargain in balloons in the dime store. They were 21 for a quarter.

She thought it was a wonderful buy—until her 2-year-old insisted that she blow up all of them at one sitting.

YOU TELL 'EM, MIN

Minnie L. Goodwin of 805 C st. sw. had a little car trouble the other day. Her auto stalled in traffic, and temporarily refused to budge.

Mr. Impatient, in the car behind, began leaning on his horn. Unfortunately, this had no effect on the car's balky mechanism.

Minnie took about as much of the honking as she could, then finally walked back to the other motorist and said: "Either give me a push or shut up." He pushed.

MISCELLANY

Most of our tourist guides report they had slim pickings on Easter Sunday, in spite of the crowds. One old-timer told me: "You can't make any money on the big holidays. I always knock off and spend the day delivering flowers for a florist friend of mine" . . . Helen M. Berberich of The Washington Post's classified advertising department noticed the bewilderment of an elderly gentleman at Dupont Circle during the Easter parade. Confused by the "Don't Walk" signs, he grumbled: "What do they expect us to do—crawl?" . . . Mrs. L. H. Biggs of 1502 Seminary rd., Silver Spring, Md., writes: "When we got off a Chevy Chase bus the other day, we discovered that my sister-in-law's son had left his cap on the bus. Officer 926 in squad car 84 saw us write down the number of the bus, asked if something was wrong, and when we told him, dashed after the bus and rescued the cap. He certainly was a friend in need." That's not surprising. Officer 926 is Pvt. J. W. Carrol of No. 8 Precinct, who has been making friends for the Police Department for about a quarter of a century . . . The Rev. Charles E. Walden, jr., tells me that his 5-year-old son, Corky, was writing on his blackboard the other day and, at the end of a line, finished up with an unintelligible curlicue. "What do you call that, shorthand?" asked Mr. Walden. "Nope," replied Corky, "short of space."

ADD DEFINITIONS

"Editor: Former reporter who has forgotten how much he used to resent the things editors did to his copy."

WHO SAID IT?

A. B. Cook of 3905 22d st. ne. has been trying to identify the author of a favorite quotation, with no success. Not being able to track down the source, he's not even sure of the wording. But it goes something like this:

"We are all like swimmers in the sea, poised on the top of a huge wave of Fate which hangs uncertain as to which way to fall. Whether it will heave us up to land or roll us out to sea, we know not; and no search will make us know. Only the event will teach us, in its hour."

OVERHEARD

R. M. Wilson of 4801 Connecticut ave. nw. forwards this fragment of post-Easter conversation:

"We had to have the rabbit chloroformed. You might say he turned out to be an 'ether bunny.'"

THESE MODERN TIMES

A friend of mine tells me that his wife engaged a new baby sitter a few months ago, and thereby uncovered a fascinating commentary on our times.

The sitter asked whether it would be all right if her husband came along. She explained that the old man didn't want her to go out alone at night.

That was okay with my friend's wife, so the sitter and her husband came, and sat, and turned out to be such a nice couple that they were invited back many more times.

After a while, the two couples got to be pretty chummy, and the sitters broke down and confessed. They had fibbed a little in their original explanation of why they both showed up for sitting dates.

It seems that they have a small house, and both their mothers-in-law have been living with them for some time. Baby sitting is the only way they can be by themselves.

Truman Shows 5-Year Changes

By Drew Pearson

Five years ago today, Harry Truman stood uneasily in the Cabinet Room of the White House taking the oath as President of the United States. He was a humble man, imploring the Lord for guidance and the American people for help.

Mr. Truman

A lot has changed since then. The wars then raging on two continents are officially ended, though they continue unofficially without loss of life. The men who saw Harry Truman take the oath and who helped him during those first trying days are largely gone now. Bob Hannegan, who put his friend in the White House almost with his own bare hands, is dead, saddened by the fact that the President had turned his back.

Three Secretaries of State have also come and gone—Ed Stettinius, now dead; Jimmy Byrnes, now bitter, and George Marshall, now retired.

Many of the President's close friends in the Senate have disappeared from his table, and the coterie surrounding Truman has grown smaller and smaller. The palace guard is as tight as a drum.

Jealous Palace Guard

It will be for history to evaluate the wisdom of Truman's policies and the efficacy with which they were carried out. It is too early to judge them now. But one factor now molding the results that historians later must evaluate is the White House circle and its jealousy toward the outside world.

This zeal to knock off any man who even remotely resembles a rival to the President is the most important fact in the political life of the Nation today.

It has been responsible for alienation of one of the strongest members of the Truman Cabinet, former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, now Senator from New Mexico. And it is causing friction between the President and the Vice President today.

Those who do not know the little band of zealots around Truman would scarcely believe it, but they have convinced themselves and him that Alben Barkley at the age of 72 is a candidate for President. Furthermore, they have cooked up a tortured theory that Barkley took a young bride in order to demonstrate to the world that he was hale, hearty and able to run. They also suspect that Barkley's many speaking engagements are to build him up for 1952.

The broad-gauged Barkley, though well aware of this coolness, has chosen to ignore it. On the surface, his relations with the White House remain the same. But the old cordiality, the personal warmth between him and Truman is no more.

Will Truman Run Again?

It is not known, even by Truman's intimates, whether he intends to run in 1952. But it is definitely known that the palace guard is itching to have him run. Apparently the lush life of Key West and the White House is something they hate to contemplate losing.

This was why, one year ago, the White House was anxious to have Paul Hoffman bow out as ECA administrator. He was becoming too popular, was feared as a Republican candidate. Today he is not considered so popular and is being urged to say on. This was also why a weak Democratic candidate was left in the race against Senator Taft in Ohio. For Taft would be an easier presidential candidate to defeat than Eisenhower; but he would have no chance of the nomination if defeated in Ohio.

Jealousy is carried to such extremes that former White House Counselor Clark Clifford recently canceled an engagement his wife had made with the Clinton Anderson family to go to the cherry blossom festival together. The Anderson and Clifford daughters had once been cherry blossom queens, but Clifford feared it would put him in wrong at the White House to be seen with the former Secretary of Agriculture, who committed the grave sin of being willing to run for Vice President.

Hurting Foreign Policy

The most important result of this White House jealousy is in the field of foreign affairs, where Dean Acheson recalls all too vividly what happened to Jimmy Byrnes when he tried to conduct foreign policy without constantly consulting the White House.

In fact, it was Acheson who had to straighten things out between Truman and Byrnes when Jimmy made the mistake of announcing from London that he would make a broadcast to the American people. Mr. Truman hit the ceiling. He wanted no foreign policy statements except his own made to the American people.

All during the Byrnes regime, General Vaughan kept needling his chief. "People are talking about the Byrnes policy," he would say. "They ought to be talking about the Truman policy."

So only a few weeks after Byrnes' error in announcing a broadcast to the American people, a presidential cable went to General Marshall asking him to get ready to become Secretary of State.

That is why Acheson's hands have been partially tied in defending himself from Senator McCarthy. He could have made a masterful presentation of the facts regarding other Presidents who withheld files from Congress, from George Washington to William Howard Taft. And he could have made a brilliant, clarifying statement regarding the loyalty review boards and how they were staffed with Republicans. But he didn't.

Instead, Mr. Truman issued abrupt statements at Key West, ignoring the clarifying background arguments that would have materially helped the public understand the Truman-Acheson position.

A President is only as powerful as his public support. Congress knows this and begins to rebel the minute presidential popularity weakens. Today Truman's popularity has weakened—thanks largely to the band of jealous zealots around him in the White House.

Angler's Line Snags Boat Owner In Lawsuit Here

The Potomac herring run resulted yesterday in a Municipal Court lawsuit for $29.50 for the loss of one rod and reel, complete with hook, line and sinker.

The suit was filed by Paul Bennett, of 1330 E st. ne. He said he was casting for herring last week off Hains Point when his line was carried off by a small motorboat occupied by the defendant, Edward P. Whelen, of 941 Maryland ave. sw., according to the suit.

Reporters were told that Bennett had just warned a fellow fisherman to be on the lookout for passing boats when his own line was snagged by the vessel.
